TITLE

DISCUSSION AND POSSIBLE ACTION REGARDING AN AMENDMENT TO THE REDONDO BEACH MUNICIPAL CODE PERTAINING TO CAMPAIGN FINANCE AND CONTRACTING FOR INVESTIGATION SERVICES FOR ALLEGED CAMPAIGN FINANCE REPORTING VIOLATIONS

INTRODUCE BY TITLE ONLY ORDINANCE NO. 3243-22, AN ORDINANCE OF THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF REDONDO BEACH, CALIFORNIA, AMENDING TITLE 2, CHAPTER 2, SECTIONS 2-2.303, 2-2.304, 2-2.306 AND 2-2.309 OF THE REDONDO MUNICIPAL CODE REGARDING CAMPAIGN CONTRIBUTION LIMITS FOR ELECTIONS, ON FIRST READING; AND

APPROVE ENGAGEMENT LETTER WITH THE W GROUP, INC. FOR INVESTIGATIVE AND CONSULTING SERVICES PERTAINING TO ALLEGED CAMPAIGN FINANCE REPORTING VIOLATIONS AT A RATE OF $200 PER HOUR AND OUT-OF-POCKET EXPENSE REIMBURSEMENT

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Pursuant to City Council direction on April 5, 2022, Ordinance No. 3243-22 amending Title 2, Chapter 2 of the Municipal Code pertaining to campaign finance contribution limits is attached. The City Attorney's April 5th recommendations and concerns remain unchanged.

Engagement Letter for Investigation Services

After an extensive search, The W Group was identified as qualified to provide specialized investigatory services for alleged violations of the ordinance. An engagement letter is attached for Council's consideration, which requires City indemnification. The City Attorney's office, City Clerk and Risk Manager have liability related concerns given that only reasonable legal fees would be covered to the extent the City's self-insured retention has been reached. City insurance would not cover any settlement. The City Attorney and City Clerk do not recommend approval.

BACKGROUND

On April 5, 2022, Council directed staff (4-1, Emdee dissenting) to return with an ordinance amending the RBMC pertaining to campaign finance reporting and enforcement. Council's motion included amending campaign donation limits with CPI adjustments; not to allow donations after 3 months elapse after an election; contract with an outside agency to conduct investigations of alleged reporting violations; and assigning enforcement to the City Attorney's office; and a fine increase to $2000 per violation.

COORDINATION

The City Clerk's office collaborated with the City Attorney's office on the development of this administrative report.

FISCAL IMPACT

City Clerk's Office budgeted $50,000 for Investigation Services for Fiscal Year 2022-2023.

Title 2, Chapter 2, Article 3 Campaign Contribution Limits - Redline

2-2.301 Purpose.

It is the intent of the City Council in enacting this article to place realistic and enforceable limits on the amounts persons may contribute to political campaigns in municipal elections. The City Council finds that the provisions of this article are necessary to prevent the actuality or appearance of corruption in the election process.

2-2.302 Definitions.

Unless otherwise defined in this chapter, words and phrases used hereinafter shall have the same meaning as defined in the Political Reform Act of 1974 which is codified in Title 9 of the California Government Code as it now exists or may hereafter be amended.

2-2.303 Campaign contribution limits: Candidates for City Council

For general municipal and runoff elections, no person shall make to any candidate for City Council or the controlled committee of such a candidate, and no such candidate or the candidate's controlled committee shall accept from any such person, a contribution or contributions totaling more than One Thousand Two Hundred dollars (~~$4000~~1200.00) for the general municipal election and One Thousand Two Hundred dollars (~~$4000~~1200.00) for the runoff election. The One Thousand Two Hundred dollar (~~$4000~~1200.00) limit specified above shall be adjusted in June of every odd numbered year commencing in 2019 for changes in the consumer price index for the Los Angeles Area, CPI-U rounded upwards or downwards to the nearest $50.00. Nothing herein shall be construed to restrict a candidate from contributing his or her own funds or assets to his or her campaign.

2-2.304 Campaign contribution limits: Candidates for City Clerk, City Attorney, City Treasurer, School Board Member and Mayor

For general municipal and runoff elections, no person shall make to any candidate for any of the office of City Clerk, City Attorney, City Treasurer, School Board Member or Mayor or the controlled committee of such a candidate, and no such candidate or the candidate's controlled committee shall accept from any such person, a contribution or contributions totaling more than Two Thousand, Five-Seven Hundred dollars (~~$2,500~~700.00) for the general municipal election and Two Thousand, Five-Seven Hundred dollars (~~$2,500~~700.00) for the runoff election. The Two Thousand, Five-Sever Hundred dollar (~~$2,500~~700.00) limit specified above shall be adjusted in June of every odd numbered year commencing in 2019-2023 for changes in the consumer price index for the Los Angeles Area, CPI-U rounded upwards or downwards to the nearest $50.00. Nothing herein shall be construed to restrict a candidate from contributing his or her own funds or assets to his or her campaign.

2-2.305 Loans.

(a) A loan shall be considered a contribution from the maker and the guarantor of the loan and shall be subject to the contribution limitations of this chapter.

(b) Every loan to a candidate's controlled committee shall be by written agreement.

(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, a candidate for City Council shall not loan to his or her campaign, funds in excess of Fifteen Thousand and no/100ths ($15,000.00) Dollars in a general municipal election and Fifteen Thousand and no/100ths ($15,000.00) Dollars in a runoff election.

(d) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, a candidate for Mayor shall not loan to his or her campaign, funds in excess of Twenty-Five Thousand and no/100ths ($25,000.00) Dollars in a general municipal election and Twenty-Five Thousand and no/100ths ($25,000.00) Dollars in a runoff election.

(e) Nothing herein shall be construed to restrict a candidate from contributing his or her own funds or assets to his or her campaign.

2-2.306 Prohibition on nonelection cycle contributions

No candidate or the controlled committee of such a person shall accept any contribution except during the election cycle in which the candidate or officeholder intends to run for or be a write-in candidate for the office for which the contribution is made. Election cycle means that period commencing with January 1 of the even numbered year immediately preceding the general municipal election for that office and ending ~~six-three~~ (63) months after the general municipal election. For a special election, the election cycle commences with the declaration of a vacancy in an elective office and ends ~~six-three~~ (63) months after the special election date.

2-2.307 Return of contributions.

A contribution will not be considered to be received or accepted if it is not negotiated or deposited, and in addition it is returned to the donor within fourteen (14) days of receipt.

2-2.308 Family contributions.

Contributions from spouses shall be treated as contributions by separate persons and shall not be aggregated. Contributions by children under the age of eighteen (18) years of age shall be treated as contributions by their parents (or legal guardians) and attributed one-half (1/2) to each parent (or legal guardian) or the total amount to a single parent (or legal guardian).

2-2.309 Violations; Misdemeanor

Any person violating any of the provisions of this chapter shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. Each separate offense shall be punishable by a fine not exceeding Two Thousand and no/100ths ($2,000.00) Dollars or imprisonment not exceeding six (6) months, or both.

2, CHAPTER 2, SECTIONS 2-2.303, 2-2.304, 2-2.306 AND
2-2.309 OF THE REDONDO BEACH MUNICIPAL CODE REGARDING CAMPAIGN CONTRIBUTION LIMITS FOR ELECTIONS

WHEREAS, the problem of campaign expenditures has become a serious reality of American politics and campaigns in the City of Redondo Beach are not excepted; and

WHEREAS, incidental to the high cost of election campaigning is the problem of improper influence, real or potential, exercised by campaign contributors over elected officials; and

WHEREAS, it is important to place reasonable and enforceable limits on the amounts that persons may contribute to political campaigns in municipal elections for the prevention of corruption and the appearance of corruption spawned by the real or imagined coercive influence of large financial contributions on candidates' positions and on their actions if elected to office; and

WHEREAS, on April 5, 2022, the City Council voted 4-1 to amend Sections 2-2.303, 2-2.304, 2-2.306 and 2-2.309 of the Campaign Contribution Ordinance; and

WHEREAS, those changes are reflected in this ordinance.

NOW, THEREFORE, THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF REDONDO BEACH, CALIFORNIA, DOES HEREBY ORDAIN AS FOLLOWS:

SECTION 1. AMENDMENT OF CODE. Title 2, Chapter 2, Section 2-2.303 of the Redondo Beach Municipal Code is hereby amended to read as follows:

"2-2.303 Campaign contribution limits: Candidates for City Council

For general municipal and runoff elections, no person shall make to any candidate for City Council or the controlled committee of such a candidate, and no such candidate or the candidate's controlled committee shall accept from any such person, a contribution or contributions totaling more than One Thousand Two Hundred dollars ($1200.00) for the general municipal election and One Thousand Two Hundred dollars ($1200.00) for the runoff election. Nothing herein shall be construed to restrict a candidate from contributing his or her own funds or assets to his or her campaign."

SECTION 2. AMENDMENT OF CODE. Title 2, Chapter 2, Section 2-2.304 of the Redondo Beach Municipal Code is hereby amended to read as follows:

“2-2.304 Campaign contribution limits: Candidates for City Clerk, City Attorney, City Treasurer, School Board Member and Mayor

For general municipal and runoff elections, no person shall make to any candidate for any of the offices of City Clerk, City Attorney, City Treasurer, School Board Member or Mayor or the controlled committee of such a candidate, and no such candidate or the candidate's controlled committee shall accept from any such person, a contribution or contributions totaling more than Two Thousand, Seven Hundred dollars ($2,700.00) for the general municipal election and Two Thousand, Seven Hundred dollars ($2,700.00) for the runoff election. The Two Thousand, Seven Hundred dollar ($2,700.00) limit specified above shall be adjusted in June of every odd numbered year commencing in 2023 for changes in the consumer price index for the Los Angeles Area, CPI-U rounded upwards or downwards to the nearest $50.00. Nothing herein shall be construed to restrict a candidate from contributing his or her own funds or assets to his or her campaign.”

SECTION 3. AMENDMENT OF CODE. Title 2, Chapter 2, Section 2-2.306 of the Redondo Beach Municipal Code is hereby amended to read as follows:

“2-2.306 Prohibition on nonelection cycle contributions

No candidate or the controlled committee of such a person shall accept any contribution except during the election cycle in which the candidate or officeholder intends to run for or be a write-in candidate for the office for which the contribution is made. Election cycle means that period commencing with January 1 of the even numbered year immediately preceding the general municipal election for that office, and ending three (3) months after the general municipal election. SECTION 4. AMENDMENT OF CODE. Title 2, Chapter 2, Section 2-2.309 of the Redondo Beach Municipal Code is hereby amended to read as follows:

“2-2.309 Violations

Any person violating any of the provisions of this chapter shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. Each separate offense shall be punishable by a fine not exceeding Two Thousand and no/100ths ($2,000.00) Dollars or imprisonment not exceeding six (6) months, or both.”

SECTION 5. INCONSISTENT PROVISIONS. Any provisions of the Redondo Beach Municipal Code, or appendices thereto, or any other ordinances of the City inconsistent herewith, to the extent of such inconsistencies and no further, are hereby repealed.

SECTION 6. SEVERANCE. If any section, subsection, sentence, clause, or phrase of this ordinance is for any reason held to be invalid or unconstitutional by the decision of any court of competent jurisdiction, such decision shall not affect the validity of the remaining portions of the ordinance. The City Council hereby declares that it would have passed this ordinance and each section, subsection, sentence, clause, and phrase thereof, irrespective of the fact that any one or more sections, subsections, sentences, clauses, or phrases be declared invalid or unconstitutional.

SECTION 7. PUBLICATION AND EFFECTIVE DATE. This ordinance shall be published by one insertion in The Easy Reader, the official newspaper of said city, and same shall go into effect and be in full force and operation from and after thirty (30) days after its final passage and adoption.

PASSED, APPROVED AND ADOPTED this 20th day of September, 2022.

TITLE

DISCUSSION AND POSSIBLE ACTION ON A REPORT REGARDING UPDATES TO THE CAMPAIGN FINANCE ORDINANCE AND ENFORCEMENT OPTIONS

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

One of the Objectives within the Strategic Plan is a report to the City Council on possible updates to the City's Campaign Finance Ordinance and a review of enforcement options. The report provides three enforcement options for City Council discussion and consideration:

- 1) Assign investigatory duties of the Ordinance to the Redondo Beach Police Department; 2) Contract with an outside consultant to provide investigation services; or
- 3) Rescind the City's Ordinance, thereby making State limits on city campaign donations applicable to all candidates for elective office within Redondo Beach and passing investigatory duties to the Fair Political Practices Commission (FPPC).

Prosecution responsibility would remain with the City Attorney's Office for any cases referred under all three options. From an objectivity and consistency of enforcement and an overall operational efficiency standpoint the City Manager, City Clerk, and the City Attorney unanimously recommend the City Council pursue option 3.

BACKGROUND

The City's Campaign Finance Ordinance (RB Ordinance 3184-18 - Exhibit A) was adopted on January 8, 2019, and placed limits on the amount donors may contribute to political campaigns in municipal elections for the positions of Mayor and City Council. At the time of Ordinance adoption there were no State limits on the amount of political donations that applied to city elections. However, later that year, in October 2019, Assembly Bill 571 was enacted to amend the California Political Reform Act, creating campaign contribution limits ($4,900 per election) for elective offices not covered by local ordinance (effective January 1, 2020, operative January 1, 2021). For the City of Redondo Beach, this includes the offices of the City Attorney, City Clerk, City Treasurer and the School Board. Table 1 below shows current campaign contribution limits which is a mix of those set by Ordinance 3184-18 and AB 571.

Table 1

Office	Regulatory Document	Campaign Contribution Limits
Mayor	O 3184-18 (CRB)	$2,700.00
City Council	O 3184-18 (CRB)	$1,050.00
City Attorney	AB 571 (CA)	$4,900.00
City Clerk	AB 571 (CA)	$4,900.00
City Treasurer	AB 571 (CA)	$4,900.00
School Board	AB 571 (CA)	$4,900.00

One important provision of AB 571 is that the FPPC is not responsible for the administration or enforcement of any city's local campaign finance ordinance if it differs from the limit set forth in AB 571. As an example of this, prior to the adoption of AB 571, the FPPC had investigated and referred to the Torrance City Attorney for criminal prosecution an allegation that a candidate had violated the City of Torrance contribution limits. This method of processing allegations changed with the adoption of AB 571. The Redondo Beach City Council was advised of this change last year and a Budget Response Report (BRR #58, Exhibit B) was prepared by then City Manager Joe Hoefgen and City Clerk Eleanor Manzano. The BRR presented options for investigation of alleged violations of campaign contributions. No action was taken by the City Council at that time.

The City's Campaign Finance Ordinance provides for enforcement only through criminal prosecution, rather than less punitive potential administrative or civil sanctions, stating "Any person violating any of the provisions of this chapter shall be guilty of a misdemeanor" (Section 2-2.309). However, the enforcement of the Ordinance requires two separate actions take place: investigation and then - if findings deem it appropriate - prosecution.

Currently, the City's Campaign Finance Ordinance does not specify the method of investigation nor has a method of investigation been established since its adoption. By contrast, under California's regulations (specifically Government Code § 11180 and 11181), the State has vested investigatory authority in the Fair Political Practices Commission (FPPC) for violations of the Political Reform Act. For prosecution, the Political Reform Act provides that "(i)n any case in which a district attorney could act as the civil or criminal prosecutor under the provisions of this title, the elected city attorney of any charter city may act as the civil or criminal prosecutor with respect to any violations of this title occurring within the city." As such, candidates for the offices of City Attorney, City Clerk, City Treasurer and the School Board operate under a clearly-defined and established enforcement framework, whereas candidates for the offices of Mayor and City Council do not.

There are three options available to the City in the pursuance of investigations of alleged violations of the local Ordinance:

1. Assign investigation duties to the Redondo Beach Police Department, with criminal prosecution falling under the purview of the City Attorney's office.
2. Contract with an outside consultant to provide investigation services, with prosecution falling under the purview of the City Attorney's office.
3. Rescind the City's Ordinance, thereby passing investigatory duties to the FPPC. Should FPPC findings deem a violation was committed, enforcement may take place administratively, civily, or by referral for criminal prosecution to the City Attorney.

1. Redondo Beach PD Investigation, City Attorney Criminal Prosecution

Under this option, the Redondo Beach Police Department would undertake investigatory responsibility. This new assignment would require the institution of a formal investigatory framework, the establishment of a specialized unit, and training of officers assigned to the unit. Although feasible, the installation of this enforcement program would take time and continual assessments would need to occur to ensure the efficiency and efficacy of the unit. What should also be considered with this option is the prospective repercussions of having an otherwise un-politicized arm of the City's administration lead investigations of elected officials.

Once an investigation is complete, should a violation be found, the case would be referred to the City Attorney's office for prosecution.

2. External Consultant Investigation, City Attorney Criminal Prosecution

Under this enforcement option, the City would retain the services of a consultant to perform investigations. Once an investigation is complete, should a violation be found prosecution of the case would be referred to the City Attorney's office.

The cost of this option is largely based on the number of claims filed as well as the extent of investigation demanded by the allegations, and is therefore difficult to estimate. Based on comparable service contracts currently in place, preliminary cost estimates indicate a potential rate of $15,000-$30,000 per investigation. Staff contacted surrounding cities with this particular investigatory framework in place and inquired about costs incurred. Thus far, these cities have not retained consultant services for violation investigations.

3. Rescind City Ordinance, FPPC Assumes Investigative Responsibility, City Attorney Criminal Prosecution

Under this option, the City would rescind its Campaign Finance Ordinance, thereby defaulting to the State's Political Reform Act for campaign financing parameters and the FPPC for investigation. Should FPPC findings deem a violation was committed, enforcement may take place administratively, civilly, or - for the most egregious violations - by referral for criminal prosecution by the City Attorney. This option would have the benefit of candidates for all elected positions in the City being under the same regulatory and enforcement framework. Also, the investigation would be done by an independent State Agency with extensive experience in doing these types of investigations. A review of the FPPC's authority and methodology is attached to this report (Exhibit D).

The Council should decide which of the three options it prefers.

1) If the Council prefers the first option, the City Manager can task the Police Chief with undertaking investigatory responsibility of any future allegations regarding violation of the City's Campaign Finance Ordinance. Under this option further budget/organizational assessment will be needed to determine what specific PD personnel would be directed to campaign investigative efforts and the impact that allocation of resources would have on current Department services.

2) If the Council prefers the second option, the City Manager will return with a list of outside consultants who can perform investigations of any future allegations regarding violation of the City's Campaign Finance Ordinance.

3) If the Council prefers the third option, the City Attorney will return with an item to rescind the City's Ordinance at a future City Council Meeting, thereby defaulting to the State's Political Reform Act for campaign financing parameters and the FPPC for investigation for all candidates for elective office in the City.

Given the adoption of AB 571 and the recent implementation of State campaign limits for local elective offices it is the unanimous recommendation of the City Manager, City Clerk, and the City Attorney that the City Council pursue option 3.

COORDINATION

The City Clerk's office, City Manager's office and City Attorney's office collaborated on the development of this administrative report.

FISCAL IMPACT

Option 1 would incur additional staff and training costs for Police Department personnel assigned to the investigation of allegations of violations of the City's Campaign Finance Ordinance. This cost has not yet been determined. Option 2 would incur approximately $15,000-$30,000 in consultant fees per investigation, though the ultimate fiscal impact is difficult to determine as it is dependent on the number and scope of future complaints. Option 3 would pass all investigation costs to the FPPC.

2-2.309 Violations; Misdemeanor

Any person violating any of the provisions of this chapter shall be guilty of a misdemeanor."

SECTION 2. EXEMPT FROM CEQA. The City Council determines that this ordinance is exempt from review under the California Environmental Quality Act (Cal. Pub. Regs. Code Section 15000, et seq.) because the only potential physical effect on the environment that could foreseeably result from its implementation is a reduction in environmental impacts associated with vehicle traffic including, but not limited to, traffic congestion and greenhouse gas emissions. Such a reduction in the use or operation of an existing City street or property is categorically exempt from further CEQA review under Cal. Code Regs. Title 14, Section 15301. This ordinance, therefore, is an action that does not have the potential to cause significant effects on the environment.

SECTION 3. INCONSISTENT PROVISIONS. Any provisions of the Redondo Beach Municipal Code, or appendices thereto, or any other ordinances of the City inconsistent herewith, to the extent of such inconsistencies and no further, are hereby repealed.

SECTION 4. SEVERANCE. If any section, subsection, sentence, clause, or phrase of this ordinance is for any reason held to be invalid or unconstitutional by the decision of any court of competent jurisdiction, such decision shall not affect the validity of the remaining portions of the ordinance. The City Council hereby declares that it would have passed this ordinance and each section, subsection, sentence, clause, and phrase thereof, irrespective of the fact that any one or more sections, subsections, sentences, clauses, or phrases be declared invalid or unconstitutional.

SECTION 5. PUBLICATION AND EFFECTIVE DATE. This ordinance shall be published by one insertion in The Beach Reporter, the official newspaper of said city, and same shall go into effect and be in full force and operation from and after thirty (30) days after its final passage and adoption.

CITY OF REDONDO BEACH BUDGET RESPONSE REPORT #58

June 15, 2021

Question:

What are possible options for investigating financial violations related to campaign contributions?

Response:

City Ordinance 3184-18 (attached) was adopted on January 18, 2019 to “place realistic and enforceable limits on the amounts persons may contribute to political campaigns in municipal elections” to “prevent the actuality or appearance of corruption in the election process” of which the ordinance limits are imposed on candidates for the positions of Mayor and City Council. Subsequently, Assembly 571 was enacted to amend the Political Reform Act in October 2019, and effective January 1, 2020 affecting campaign contribution limits for elective offices not covered by local ordinance. This statute was not in place when the City Council enacted our ordinance. The FPPC advises they conduct investigations only on alleged state law campaign finance violations not covered by City Ordinance (City Attorney, City Clerk, City Treasurer, and School Board) and advised that local ordinances are to be investigated by the local jurisdiction.

Due to the fact that the City Attorney’s Office would handle the prosecution of violations as misdemeanors, they cannot also conduct the investigations leading to prosecution. California City Clerks for cities with campaign finance ordinances were queried for methods of violation investigations. Of the five responses received, the method of investigations ranged from in-house code enforcement to outside contracted investigation firms. Two of the five cities that responded have a City Council-appointed ethics boards/commission that review alleged violations that work in concert with outside firms.

CITY	METHOD OF INVESTIGATION
Berkeley	Our Fair Campaign Practices Commission was created specifically to enforce the campaign finance ordinance. City Attorney’s Office supports the commission and does the investigative work.
Chula Vista	Our Board of Ethics appoints a panel of outside attorneys to review complaints.
Rohnert Park	We currently use our code compliance department to enforce the ordinance.
Sacramento	We have an Ethics Commission that oversees campaign finance and the evaluator/investigator (attorney) is hired by them by RFQ process.

Santa Monica	Complaints received by City Clerk who works with my City Attorney's Office to send a letter to the filer. Works with the Attorney's Office to bring the filer into compliance, fine or refer them to the District Attorney's Office. (But the District Attorney's Office has indicated they can't file such cases.)
--------------	---

In summary, because the City of Redondo Beach has its own local campaign contribution limits applicable to the Mayor and City Council campaigns, the FPPC will not investigate violations for these campaigns. Should the City Council wish to allocate funds to retain outside investigators/counsel to investigate Mayor/Council campaign violations, it is difficult to estimate a dollar amount to deal with an unknown number of violations that may be alleged. However, if pressed for a placeholder dollar amount, staff would suggest $50,000 should the City Council wish to allocate some resources. Another possible alternative could be to rescind ordinance 3184-18 which would enable the FPPC to investigate alleged campaign violations of State law.

ORDINANCE NO. 3184-18

AN ORDINANCE OF THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY
OF REDONDO BEACH, CALIFORNIA, AMENDING TITLE
2, CHAPTER 2 OF THE REDONDO BEACH MUNICIPAL CODE REGARDING CAMPAIGN CONTRIBUTION LIMITS FOR ELECTIONS

WHEREAS, the problem of campaign expenditures has become a serious reality of American politics and campaigns in the City of Redondo Beach are not excepted; and

WHEREAS, incidental to the high cost of election campaigning is the problem of improper influence, real or potential, exercised by campaign contributors over elected officials; and

WHEREAS, it is important to place reasonable and enforceable limits on the amounts that persons may contribute to political campaigns in municipal elections for the prevention of corruption and the appearance of corruption spawned by the real or imagined coercive influence of large financial contributions on candidates' positions and on their actions if elected to office.

NOW, THEREFORE, THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF REDONDO BEACH, CALIFORNIA, DOES HEREBY ORDAIN AS FOLLOWS:

SECTION 1. AMENDMENT OF CODE. Title 2, Chapter 2, Sections 2-2.301 through 2-2.309 of the Redondo Beach Municipal Code are hereby added to read as follows:

"Chapter 2 ELECTIONS

2-2.301 Purpose

It is the intent of the City Council in enacting this Article to place realistic and enforceable limits on the amounts persons may contribute to political campaigns in municipal elections. The City Council finds that the provisions of this Article are necessary to prevent the actuality or appearance of corruption in the election process.

2-2.302 Definitions

Unless otherwise defined in this chapter, words and phrases used hereinafter shall have the same meaning as defined in the Political Reform Act of 1974 which is codified in Title 9 of the California Government Code as it now exists or may hereafter be amended.

2-2.303 Campaign contribution limits: Candidates for City Council

For general municipal and runoff elections, no person shall make to any candidate for City Council or the controlled committee of such a candidate, and no such candidate or the candidate's controlled committee shall accept from any such person, a contribution or contributions totaling more than One Thousand dollars ($1000.00) for the general municipal election and One Thousand dollars ($1000.00) for the runoff election. The One Thousand dollar ($1000.00) limit specified above shall be adjusted in June of every odd numbered year commencing in 2019 for changes in the consumer price index for the Los Angeles Area, CPI-U rounded to the nearest $50.00. Nothing herein shall be construed to restrict a candidate from contributing his or her own funds or assets to his or her campaign.

2-2.304 Campaign contribution limits: Candidates for Mayor

For general municipal and runoff elections, no person shall make to any candidate for any of the office of Mayor or the controlled committee of such a candidate, and no such candidate or the candidate's controlled committee shall accept from any such person, a contribution or contributions totaling more than Two Thousand, Five Hundred dollars ($2,500.00) for the general municipal election and Two Thousand, Five Hundred dollars ($2,500.00) for the runoff election. The Two Thousand, Five Hundred dollar ($2,500.00) limit specified above shall be adjusted in June of every odd numbered year commencing in 2019 for changes in the consumer price index for the Los Angeles Area, CPI-U rounded to the nearest $50.00. Nothing herein shall be construed to restrict a candidate from contributing his or her own funds or assets to his or her campaign.

2-2.305 Loans

- (1) A loan shall be considered a contribution from the maker and the guarantor of the loan and shall be subject to the contribution limitations of this Chapter.
- (2) Every loan to a candidate's controlled committee shall be by written agreement.
- (3) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Section 2-2.306, a candidate for City Council shall not loan to his or her campaign, funds in excess of Fifteen Thousand dollars ($15,000.00) in a general municipal election and Fifteen Thousand dollars ($15,000.00) in a runoff election.
- (4) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Section 2-2.306, a candidate for Mayor shall not loan to his or her campaign, funds in excess of Twenty-Five Thousand dollars ($25,000.00) in a general municipal election and Twenty-Five Thousand dollars ($25,000.00) in a runoff election.
- (5) Nothing herein shall be construed to restrict a candidate from contributing his or her own funds or assets to his or her campaign.

2-2.306 Prohibition on nonelection cycle contributions

No candidate or the controlled committee of such a person shall accept any contribution except during the election cycle in which the candidate or officeholder intends to run for or be a write-in candidate for the office for which the contribution is made. Election cycle means that period commencing with January 1 of the even numbered year immediately preceding the general municipal election for that office and ending six (6) months after the general municipal election. For a special election, the election cycle commences with the declaration of a vacancy in an elective office and ends six (6) months after the special election date.

2-2.307 Return of contributions

A contribution will not be considered to be received or accepted if it is not negotiated or deposited, and in addition it is returned to the donor within fourteen (14) days of receipt.

2-2.308 Family Contributions

Contributions from spouses shall be treated as contributions by separate persons and shall not be aggregated. Contributions by children under the age of eighteen (18) years of age shall be treated as contributions by their parents (or legal guardians) and attributed one-half (1/2) to each parent (or legal guardian) or the total amount to a single parent (or legal guardian).

2-2.309 Violations; Misdemeanor

Any person violating any of the provisions of this chapter shall be guilty of a misdemeanor."

SECTION 2. EXEMPT FROM CEQA. The City Council determines that this ordinance is exempt from review under the California Environmental Quality Act (Cal. Pub. Regs. Code Section 15000, et seq.) because the only potential physical effect on the environment that could foreseeably result from its implementation is a reduction in environmental impacts associated with vehicle traffic including, but not limited to, traffic congestion and greenhouse gas emissions. Such a reduction in the use or operation of an existing City street or property is categorically exempt from further CEQA review under Cal. Code Regs. Title 14, Section 15301. This ordinance, therefore, is an action that does not have the potential to cause significant effects on the environment.

SECTION 3. INCONSISTENT PROVISIONS. Any provisions of the Redondo Beach Municipal Code, or appendices thereto, or any other ordinances of the City inconsistent herewith, to the extent of such inconsistencies and no further, are hereby repealed.

SECTION 4. SEVERANCE. If any section, subsection, sentence, clause, or phrase of this ordinance is for any reason held to be invalid or unconstitutional by the decision of any court of competent jurisdiction, such decision shall not affect the validity of the remaining portions of the ordinance. The City Council hereby declares that it would have passed this ordinance and each section, subsection, sentence, clause, and phrase thereof, irrespective of the fact that any one or more sections, subsections, sentences, clauses, or phrases be declared invalid or unconstitutional.

SECTION 5. PUBLICATION AND EFFECTIVE DATE. This ordinance shall be published by one insertion in The Beach Reporter, the official newspaper of said city, and same shall go into effect and be in full force and operation from and after thirty (30) days after its final passage and adoption.

PASSED, APPROVED AND ADOPTED this 8th day of January, 2019.

Mayor William C. Brand

BACKGROUND:

- On January 8, 2019 the City Council adopted Ordinance No. 3184-18 regarding Campaign Contribution limits for Candidates for Mayor and for City Council, which are to be adjusted every June of odd-numbered years commencing June 2019 subject to Los Angeles Area Consumer Price Index (CPI-U).
- Effective January 1, 2020, California Assembly Bill 571 came into effect, which amends Government Code sections pertaining to campaign contribution limits that apply to elective offices that do not have limits under City ordinance. Therefore, contribution limits for the Offices of City Attorney, City Clerk, City Treasurer, and School Board are subject to the state law.

See Section 17 for Full Text of California Government Code 85300 – 85321 (Article 3 of Chapter 5, Title 9 of Political Reform Act). Assembly Bill 571 adds or amends Government Code Sections 85301, 85305-85307, and 85315-85318.

*Effective January 1, 2021, per the FPPC, the adjusted total Campaign Contribution limit for these offices is $4900.00. If a single contributor gives $4700 up to December 31, 2020, they may only give an additional $200 on or after January 1, 2021.

California Fair Political Practices Commission

California State Contribution Limits

(Effective January 1, 2021 - December 31, 2022)

Candidates seeking a state office and committees that make contributions to state candidates are subject to contribution limits from a single source. Beginning January 1, 2021 a state campaign contribution limit will by default apply to city and county candidates when the city or county does not have laws addressing a contribution limit on such candidates. (Sections 85301 - 85303.) Contributions from affiliated entities are aggregated for purposes of the limits. (Regulation 18215.1.) The chart below shows the current limits per contributor for state offices and city and county candidates when the city or county does not have laws addressing a contribution limit on such candidates. The primary, general, special, and special run-off elections are considered separate elections. Contribution limits to candidates apply to each election. Contribution limits to officeholder and other committees apply on a calendar year basis. Contact your city or county about contribution limits for local offices, state campaign contribution limit will by default apply to city and county candidates when the city or county does not have laws addressing a contribution limit on such candidates.

Contribution Limits to State and Local* Candidates Per Election

Candidate or Officeholder	Contributor Sources
	Person (individual, business entity, committee/PAC)	Small Contributor Committee (see definition on page 2)	Political Party
City and County Candidates subject to Section 85301 (d)	$4,900	$4,900	$4,900
Senate and Assembly	$4,900	$9,700	No Limit
CalPERS/CalSTRS	$4,900	$9,700	No Limit
Lt. Governor, Secretary of State, Attorney General, Treasurer, Controller, Supt. of Public Instruction, Insurance Commissioner, and Board of Equalization	$8,100	$16,200	No Limit
Governor	$32,400	$32,400	No Limit

*State campaign contribution limit will by default apply to city and county candidates when the city or county does not have laws addressing a contribution limit on such candidates

Contributions to Other State Committees Per Calendar Year

Committee	Contributor Sources
	Person (individual, business entity, committee/PAC)
Committee (Not Political Party) that Contributes to State Candidates (PAC)	$8,100
Political Party Account for State Candidates	$40,500
Small Contributor Committee	$200
Committee Account NOT for State Candidates (Ballot Measure, PAC, Political Party)	No Limit*

*State committees (including political parties and PACs) may receive contributions in excess of the limits identified above as long as the contributions are NOT used for state candidate contributions. (Regulation 18534.)

Contributions to State Officeholder Committees Per Calendar Year

Committee	Contributor Sources
	Any Source (Person, Small Contributor Committee or Political Party)	Aggregate From All Sources
Senate and Assembly	$4,000	$67,300
CalPERS/CalSTRS	$4,000	$67,300
Lt. Governor, Secretary of State, Attorney General, Treasurer, Controller, Supt. of Public Instruction, Insurance Commissioner, and Board of Equalization	$6,700	$134,600
Governor	$26,900	$269,300

California Fair Political Practices Commission

California State Contribution Limits

(Effective January 1, 2021 - December 31, 2022)

The contribution limits are effective for elections held between January 1, 2021 and December 31, 2022. (Regulation 18545.) These limits do not apply to contributions made to elections in previous years. Such contributions are subject to the limits in place for that year see previous charts.

Legal Defense Funds

Contributions raised for a legal defense fund are not subject to contribution limits or the voluntary expenditure ceiling. However, a candidate or officeholder may raise, in total, no more than is reasonably necessary to cover attorney's fees and other legal costs related to the proceeding for which the fund is created. (Section 85304; Regulation 18530.4.)

Recall Elections

A state officeholder and city or county officeholder subject to Section 85301 (d) who is the subject of a recall may set up a separate committee to oppose the qualification of the recall measure and, if the recall petition qualifies, the recall election. Neither contribution limits nor voluntary expenditure ceilings apply to the committee to oppose the recall that is controlled by the officeholder who is the target of the recall attempt. Candidates running to replace an officeholder who is the target of a recall are subject to the contribution limits and the expenditure limits applicable to the election for that office. (Section 85315; Regulation 18531.5.)

Ballot Measure Committees

Contributions to ballot measure committees controlled by a candidate for elective state office or a candidate for elective city or county office subject to Section 85301 (d) are not limited.

Contributions from State Candidates and Candidates subject to Section 85301 (d)

A state candidate or candidate for elective city or county office subject to Section 85301 (d) may not contribute more than $4,900 to a committee controlled by another state candidate or candidate for elective city or county office subject to Section 85301 (d) (This limit applies on a per election basis and includes, in the aggregate, contributions made from the candidate's personal funds and from campaign funds. (Section 85305; Regulation 18535.) This limit does not apply to a committee controlled by a state candidate or a committee controlled by a candidate for elective city or county office subject to Section 85301 (d) to oppose his or her recall or their contributions made to a legal defense fund established by a candidate for elective state office or candidate for elective city or county office subject to Section 85301(d). It also does not apply to contributions made by a candidate for elective state office or a candidate for elective city or county office subject to Section 85301 (d) to a ballot measure committee controlled by another state candidate or candidate for elective city or county office subject to Section 85301 (d). Please note there are certain rules applicable to use of funds held by state officeholder committees (See Regulation 18531.62.)

Communications Identifying State Candidates

Any committee that makes a payment or a promise of payment totaling $50,000 or more for a communication that:

1. Clearly identifies a state candidate; but
2. Does not expressly advocate the election or defeat of the candidate; and
3. Is disseminated, broadcast, or otherwise published within 45 days of an election, may not receive a contribution from any single source of more than $40,500 in a calendar year if the communication is made at the behest of the candidate featured in the communication. (Section 85310.)

Officeholder Committees

Officeholder contributions must be cumulated (in full) with any other contributions from the same contributor(s) for any other future elective state office or elective city or county office subject to Section 85301 (d) for which the officeholder maintains a controlled committee during the term of office in which the contribution is received. Contributions to candidates for future elections and to their officeholder account are cumulated for purposes of contribution limits. (Regulation 18531.62.)

Contributions from State Lobbyists

A state lobbyist may not contribute to a state officeholder's or candidate's committee if the lobbyist is registered to lobby the agency of the elected officer or the agency to which the candidate is seeking election. The lobbyist also may not contribute to a local committee controlled by any such state candidate. (Section 85702; Regulation 18572.) In addition, effective January 1, 2015, lobbyists and lobbying firms may no longer take advantage of the $500 or less home/office fundraiser exception that is available to other individuals and entities. (Section 82015(f).)

Local Elections

Many cities and counties have local contribution limits and other election rules. "Local Campaign Ordinances" are listed on the FPPC's website. Check with your city or county about contribution limits for local elections. A State campaign contribution limit will by default apply to city and county candidates when the city or county does not have laws addressing a contribution limit on such candidates.

Definitions

Person: An individual, proprietorship, firm, partnership, joint venture, syndicate, business trust, company, corporation, limited liability company, association, committee, and any other organization or group of persons acting in concert. (Section 82047.)

Small Contributor Committee: Any committee that meets all of the following criteria:

- (a) The committee has been in existence for at least six months.
- (b) The committee receives contributions from 100 or more persons.
- (c) No one person has contributed to the committee more than $200 per calendar year.
- (d) The committee makes contributions to five or more candidates. (Section 85203; Regulation 18503.)

Political Party Committee: The state central committee or county central committee of an organization that meets the requirements for recognition as a political party under Elections Code Section 5100. (Section 85205.)

FAIR POLITICAL PRACTICES COMMISSION

Mission of the Commission

- The mission of the Fair Political Practices Commission is to promote the integrity of state and local government in California through fair, impartial interpretation and enforcement of political campaign, lobbying and conflict of interest laws.
- Advice, Train and Educate - Legal and Education Divisions
- Audit, Investigate, and Prosecute - Enforcement Division

Enforcement Division Mission

To fairly, effectively and efficiently enforce the provisions of the Political Reform Act.

Enforcement Division

- 30 Employees
- 9 Attorneys
- 9 Investigators
- 8 Specialists
- 4 Support Staff

Enforcement Under the PRA

- “In enacting the Political Reform Act, the people find and declare that previously laws regulating political practices have suffered from inadequate enforcement by state and local authorities.” (Gov’t Code § 81001(h))
- “Adequate enforcement mechanisms should be provided to public officials and private citizens in order that the Political Reform Act will be vigorously enforced.” (Gov’t Code § 81002(f))

Duty to Investigate

- “Upon the sworn complaint of any person or on its own initiative, the Commission shall investigate possible violations of this title relating to any agency, official, election, lobbyist or legislative or administrative action.” (Gov’t Code § 83115)
- “...the Commission may make investigations and audits with respect to any reports or statements required by this title.” (Gov’t Code § 90003)

Administrative Investigations

- Gov't Code § 11180 authorizes investigations and prosecutions concerning “all matters relating to the business activities and subjects under the jurisdiction of the department” including “violations of any law.”
- Gov't Code § 11181 provides that in connection with investigations, the department head may “issue subpoenas for the . . . production of papers, books, accounts, documents . . . and testimony in an inquiry, investigation, hearing or proceeding pertinent or material thereto in any part of the state.”
 - FPPC has administrative subpoena power through this section and from within the Act itself (Gov't Code § 83118)

Administrative Investigations

The California Supreme Court stated in Brovelli v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1961) 56 Cal.2d 524, 529:

“As has been said by the United States Supreme Court, the power to make administrative inquiry is not derived from a judicial function but is more analogous to the power of a grand jury, which does not depend on a case or controversy in order to get evidence but can investigate ‘merely on suspicion that the law is being violated, or even just because it wants assurance that it is not.’” (United States v. Morton Salt Co., 338 U.S. 632, 642-643.)
(emphasis added)

What the Commission Enforces

- Financial Reporting by Public Officials (SEIs)
- Conflicts-of-Interest for Public Officials (GC 87100 & 1090)
- Gifts and Honoraria
- Post-Governmental Employment (State & Local)
- Mass Mailings & Advertising Disclosure
- Campaign Finance and Reporting
- State Lobbying

Enforcement Options

Most violations of the Act can be prosecuted three ways:

- Administrative
- Civil
- Criminal

Administrative Prosecution

- Most common type of FPPC action
- Can seek penalties of up to $5,000 per violation
 - More for certain advertising violations
- Statute of Limitations – 5 years
 - Can be tolled with a PC Report, tolling agreement, or if intent to conceal
- Applicable to all violations of Act
- Faster and more efficient resolution than civil court

Civil Prosecution

- Can be initiated by FPPC, private citizens, Attorney General or District Attorneys (Gov't Code § 91001)
- FPPC – State or any State agency, or local with written DA permission
- Attorney General – FPPC only
- District Attorneys – Any other agency
- Private Citizens – Must request action from DA, FPPC or AG first.
 - 120 days to respond.

Criminal Prosecution

- Must knowingly or willfully violate Act (Gov't Code § 91000)
- Violations are misdemeanors
- Statute of Limitations – 4 years
- If convicted, can't be candidate or lobbyist for four years
 - Judge may waive this, but must do so explicitly
 - Violation of this is a felony

Sources of Cases

Enforcement cases are initiated by:

1. Complaints (Sworn, Non-sworn or Anonymous)
2. FPPC SEI Unit and filing officer referrals
3. Audits and audit referrals
4. Media reports
5. Staff-initiated investigations
6. Tips
7. Referrals from law enforcement agencies

Cases, Complaints and Referrals

2016 (Election year)

- 1,180 Complaints
- 350 Referrals
- 1,530 Total

2017 (Non-election year)

- 564 Complaints
- 1,616 Referrals
- 2,180 Total

Intake

- All complaints and referrals go through the intake process to determine whether Enforcement should open a case.
- In determining whether to open a case, intake staff review the complaint or referral, any additional information provided by the complainant, publicly available information, and any material submitted by the subject of a complaint.
- If the Intake staff determines sufficient evidence is present to suggest a violation may have occurred then a case is opened.

Intake Timeline

(Regulation 18360)

- Sworn Complaints:
 - Within 3 days, respondent is sent a copy of the complaint
 - Enforcement staff has 14 days to send investigate/won't investigate letter/need more time letter to complainant with a copy to respondent (Gov't Code § 83115)
- Commission-initiated cases (includes everything else):
 - No legally-mandated deadlines
 - Letter of Inquiry sent when appropriate
 - Generally, 10 days to respond
- Enforcement sends respondents notice of allegations against them 5 days prior to disclosure to the public/media.

Investigations

- Investigators and attorneys work together to gather the evidence to prove or disprove violations occurred. Auditors and other staff assist with these investigations.
- FPPC has subpoena power but must seek voluntary compliance prior to issuing subpoena unless:
 - Bank/business records
 - Threat of record destruction
- Executive Director authorizes issuance of administrative subpoenas if:
 - Records are material to the matter, and
 - the ED reasonably believes the person has the information under their control.

Audits

- The PRA requires the FPPC perform audits of the candidates and their committees for State Controller, Public Employees Retirement Board and State Board of Equalization
- FTB performs all other statutorily required audits
- FPPC has the authority to perform discretionary audits
- Contract with County of San Bernardino
- Auditors also routinely assist with complicated campaign investigations

Types of Resolutions

- No Action closure letter – If there is insufficient evidence to prosecute a case and no further information would be helpful or informative. (318)
- Advisory letter – If there is insufficient evidence to prosecute a case but the person complained about appears to need information about the Act to ensure future compliance. (17)
- Warning letter – If a violation of the Act is found but the seriousness of the offense is low, public harm is minimal, or other mitigation is found so that a monetary fine is not warranted. (505)
- Stipulation – negotiated settlement. (Mainline (66)/Streamline (262))
- Default judgment – Respondent does not participate in settlement or administrative hearing process. (12)
- Administrative Law Judge Decision – The decision is issued after an administrative hearing conducted pursuant to the Administrative Procedures Act. The decision must be approved by the Commission before being final. (1)
- Civil action – Judgment issued by a superior court. (0)

Streamline Program

- 77% of all cases prosecuted with fines go through the streamline program.
- Commission approved (May 2015): lower fines based on a formula for violations involving small amounts of contributions rec'd or expenditures made as well as SEI non-filing and SEI non-reporting.
- Commission will start discussions regarding modifying the program to change the fine amounts and possibly add additional violations, like advertising and recordkeeping violations.

Mainline Settlements

- Work with respondent (or counsel) to negotiate a mutually agreeable result, which must include:
 - An admission of violations,
 - Agreement on relevant facts, and
 - Public disclosure of any previously undisclosed information.
- “Settlement is the offspring of compromise; the question we address is not whether the final product could be prettier, smarter or snazzier, but whether it is fair, adequate and free from collusion.” (Hanlon v. Chrysler Corp., (1998) 150 F.3d 1011, 1027.)

Penalties

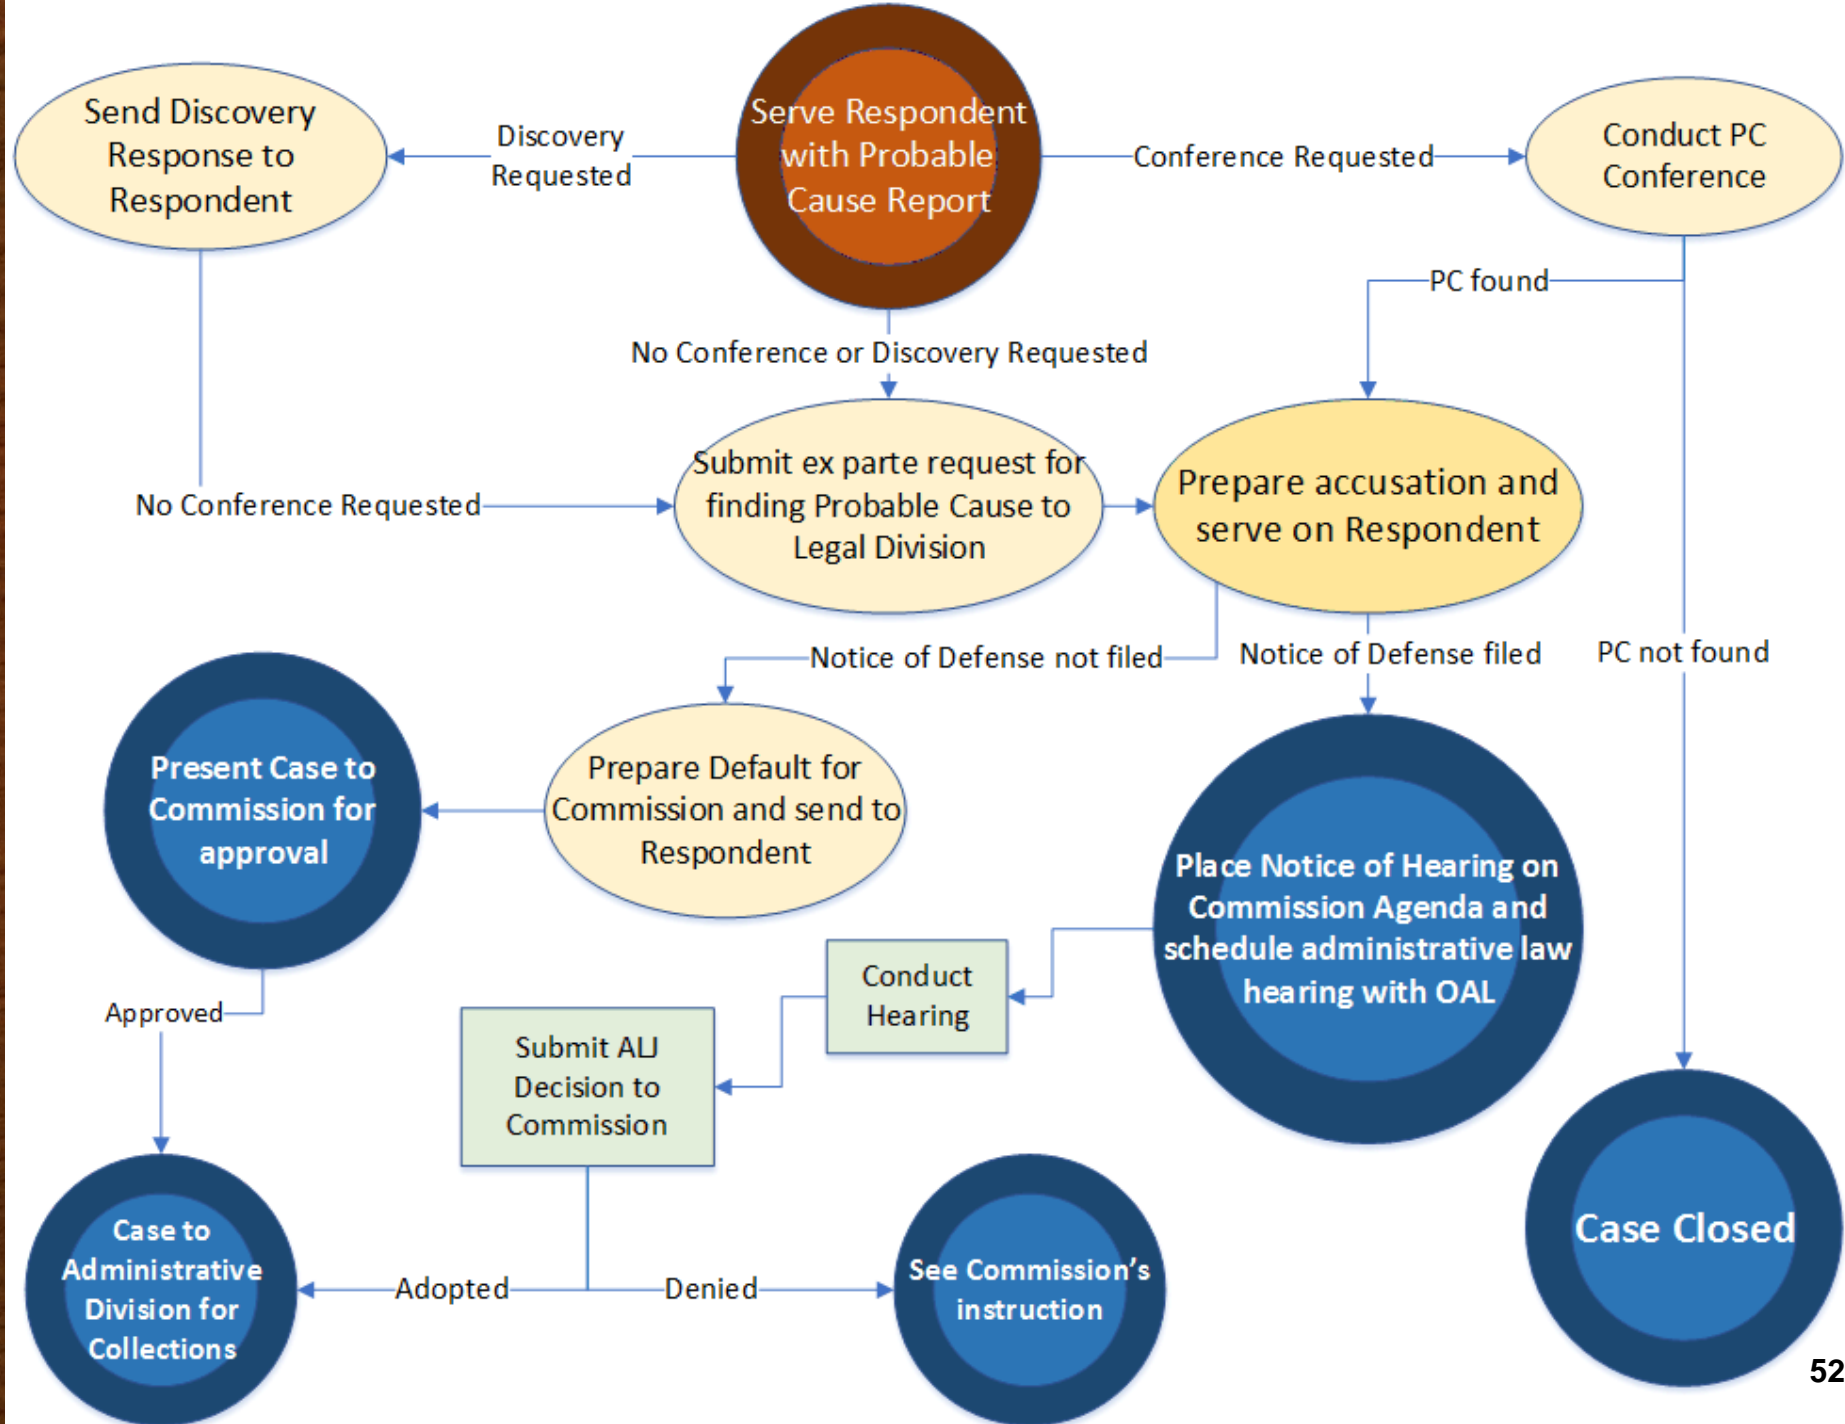

Recommended penalties determined by:

- Prior similar cases
- Commission Direction
- Factors set forth in Regulation 18361.5, subdivision (d):
 - the seriousness of the violations;
 - the presence or lack of intent to deceive the voting public;
 - whether the violation was deliberate, negligent, or inadvertent;
 - whether the Respondent demonstrated good faith in consulting with Commission staff; and
 - whether there was a pattern of violations.
- Public harm

Approval of Penalties

All penalties are approved by Commission

- 3 votes are required to approve or reject
- Can accept or reject stipulated agreements
- Enforcement cannot discuss facts not included in stipulations, except otherwise public information
- For defaults, Enforcement can discuss facts and penalty and Commission can unilaterally change the proposed penalty

Probable Cause

- Probable Cause Report. Enforcement Division files a probable cause report by serving it on the respondent. The respondent has the right to submit written argument, request discovery of evidence, and request a hearing at which respondent may submit evidence, including witness testimony.
- Probable Cause Conference. A neutral hearing officer determines whether there is sufficient evidence to lead a reasonable person to believe, or entertain a strong suspicion, the respondent violated the PRA. Respondent may request that an ALJ act as hearing officer for a probable cause hearing.

Administrative Hearings

- Administrative Hearing. If a hearing officer finds probable cause, the hearing officer orders the Enforcement Division to issue an Accusation and the case proceeds to administrative hearing pursuant to the California Administrative Procedures Act. Hearings may be conducted by the Commission, or an administrative law judge from the Office of Administrative Law. If the hearing office does not find probable cause, the case is closed.
- ALJ Finding. If an administrative law judge finds a respondent violated the PRA, the Commission may adopt or reject the ALJ's decision. The respondent may submit a brief to the Commission prior to its determination on a proposed decision.
- Further Review. Respondents have the right to request reconsideration of a decision adopted by the Commission, and may file a writ of mandate in superior court challenging a final Commission decision.

RE: Investigations

Dear Ms. Manzano:

The W Group, Inc. is pleased to confirm the engagement of our services which is memorialized in the Agreement that follows.

Services

You have asked that we perform a variety of investigative and consulting services (the "Assignment"). This Agreement applies to all agents and/or representatives engaged by The W Group on the Assignment.

We understand that you may ask us to undertake additional tasks on the Assignment that will be governed by the terms set forth in this document, unless different terms are set forth and agreed to by both of us. During the course of the Assignment, please let us know if you have any questions at any time. It is our hope to provide timely services to you through an open line of communication.

We agree to perform the Assignment under your direction. We understand that you may supply us with certain information and materials which are confidential and, in certain limited cases, might be protected by attorney-client privilege, and we agree that such information and materials are attorney work product and are protected by the attorney-client privilege. We also agree that all work performed by The W Group during this Assignment is governed by the City of Redondo Beach Municipal Code, and any amendments thereto. We will keep such information in strict confidence and will not disclose it to anyone not authorized by you, we will not use it for any other purpose, both during the time of our work on this matter and afterwards. We further agree that, at the end of our engagement on this matter, we will return to you all documents containing any such confidential information.

We understand that we should, as a general matter, refrain from discussing our work on this matter with others unless directed by the City of Redondo Beach. If we have any questions now or in the future about what we can or cannot say about this case or our work for you, we will discuss it with you or another representative designated by you.

Indemnification

You agree to hold harmless, indemnify and defend The W Group, Inc., (including costs of any retained counsel mutually approved by The W Group, Inc. and the City of Redondo Beach) its officers, employees, contractors and agents from any and all claims, actions, losses, damages and liability arising out of the performance of this Agreement, or from the enforcement or interpretation of any provision of the City of Redondo Beach Municipal Code, from any cause whatsoever, including the acts, errors or omissions of any person and for any costs or expenses incurred by The W Group, Inc. on account of any claim except where such indemnification is prohibited by law. Your agreement to hold harmless and to indemnify us does not extend to such claims, damages and costs resulting from any actions by us constituting gross negligence, fraud, willful or unlawful conduct or a breach of this Agreement.

Confidentiality

Unless otherwise directed by the City of Redondo Beach, we agree to maintain the confidentiality of all confidential and proprietary information we receive from you. While investigations authorized by the City of Redondo Beach are pending and/or awaiting a final prosecution decision, you, and third-party partners of City of Redondo Beach, agree that reports and information received from us will be treated as confidential and are intended solely for your private and exclusive use, except with our prior consent. If a prosecution declination decision results from any work performed by us, the City of Redondo Beach agrees to protect all non-disclosable information as well as any personally identifiable information (PII) that is otherwise protected by California statutes.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, The W Group, Inc. and the City of Redondo Beach agree that confidential or proprietary information does not include any information that is:

- Required to be disclosed by law, including without limitation the California Public Records Act; and
- Required to be disclosed by government order.

Termination

City may terminate this Agreement upon at least thirty days written notice to The W Group prior to the termination date. The W Group shall be paid for all services and reasonable out-of-pocket expenses incurred prior to the termination date. Written notice must be given by registered or certified mail, postage prepaid and addressed to or personally served on the following parties.

All notices, including notices of address changes, provided under this Agreement are deemed received on the third day after mailing if sent by registered or certified mail. Changes in the respective address set forth above may be made from time to time by any party upon written notice to the other party.

Fees and Charges

We have agreed to charge for our professional services at our agreed upon project rate of $200 per hour per professional assigned to any aspect of the Assignment, plus reasonable out-of-pocket expenses. Any reasonable out-of-pocket expenses arising out of performance of this Agreement, including database fees, court costs, copying fees, parking, mileage in accordance with the IRS rate, and tolls are in addition to professional fees and will be passed along at cost. From time to time, and with the prior written approval of the City of Redondo Beach, The W Group, Inc, may retain the services of court-certified experts, such as videographers, questioned document examiners or election accountants. The costs for those professionals will be incorporated into any invoices submitted to the City of Redondo Beach. However, no costs described in this section shall be paid unless receipts substantiating the expenses are attached to the invoices.

We agree that, as an independent consultant, we are not employees of the City of Redondo Beach. As such, we are responsible for any tax obligations arising from payment of consulting fees to us.

We shall provide invoices on a monthly basis, and payment of those invoices are due within forty five (45) days of City of Redondo Beach's receipt of the invoice; provided, however, that there is no dispute over the amount. The invoices will detail reasonable out-of-pocket expenses, as well as provide a brief description of relevant tasks of each project.

This Agreement shall be effective as of the date on which we first provide services to you. If this engagement letter is satisfactory to you, kindly execute and return this document.

We look forward to assisting your efforts on this Assignment.

Very truly yours,

FEDERAL ELECTION COMMISSION v. TED CRUZ FOR SENATE ET AL.*APPEAL FROM THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

No. 21–12. Argued January 19, 2022—Decided May 16, 2022

During his 2018 Senate reelection campaign and consistent with federal law, see 11 CFR §110.10; 52 U. S. C. §30101(9)(A)(i), appellee Ted Cruz loaned $260,000 to his campaign committee, Ted Cruz for Senate (Committee). To repay these and other campaign debts, campaigns may continue to receive contributions after election day. See 11 CFR §110.1(b)(3)(i). Section 304 of the Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act of 2002 (BCRA) restricts the use of post-election contributions by limiting the amount that a candidate may be repaid from such funds to $250,000. 52 U. S. C. §30116(j). Relevant here, the Federal Election Commission (FEC) has promulgated regulations establishing three rules to implement that limitation: First, a campaign may repay up to $250,000 in candidate loans using contributions made “at any time.” 11 CFR §116.12(a). Second, to the extent the loans exceed $250,000, a campaign may use pre-election funds to repay the portion exceeding $250,000 only if the repayment occurs “within 20 days of the election.” §116.11(c)(1). Third, when the 20-day post-election deadline expires, the campaign must treat any portion above $250,000 as a contribution to the campaign, precluding later repayment. §116.11(c)(2).

The Committee began repaying Cruz’s loans after the 20-day post-election window for repaying amounts over $250,000 had closed. It accordingly repaid Cruz only $250,000, leaving $10,000 of his personal loans unpaid. Cruz and the Committee filed this action in Federal District Court, alleging that Section 304 of BCRA violates the First Amendment and raising challenges to the FEC’s implementing regulation, §116.11. The District Court granted Cruz and his Committee summary judgment on their constitutional claim, holding that the loan-repayment limitation burdens political speech without sufficient justification, and dismissed as moot their challenges to the regulation.

Held:

1. Appellees have standing to challenge the threatened enforcement of Section 304. Pp. 3–10.

(a) The Government recognizes that the Committee’s present inability to repay the final $10,000 of Cruz’s loans constitutes an injury in fact both to Cruz and his Committee. It maintains, however, that appellees lack Article III standing because these injuries are not traceable to the threatened enforcement of Section 304, see Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U. S. 555, 560–561. First, the Government argues that appellees knowingly triggered the application of the loan-repayment limitation and thus their injuries are traceable to themselves, not the Government. This Court has never recognized an exception to Article III standing’s traceability requirement for injuries that a party purposely incurs. Moreover, this Court has made clear that an injury resulting from the application or threatened application of an unlawful enactment remains fairly traceable to such application, even if the injury could be described in some sense as willingly incurred. See Evers v. Dwyer, 358 U. S. 202, 204 (per curiam). Cases cited by the Government—Clapper v. Amnesty Int’l USA, 568 U. S. 398, and Pennsylvania v. New Jersey, 426 U. S. 660 (per curiam)—do not alter that conclusion. In contrast to those cases, here the appellees’ injuries are directly inflicted by the FEC’s threatened enforcement of the provisions they now challenge. That appellees chose to subject themselves to those provisions does not change the fact that they are subject to them, and will face genuine legal penalties if they do not comply. Finally, the Government’s observation that it should not be blamed for appellees’ injuries because the Committee had a legally available alternative—i.e., repaying Cruz’s loans in full with pre-election funds, within 20 days of the election—misses the point. Demanding that the Committee do so would require it to forgo the exercise of the First Amendment right the Court must assume it has when assessing standing—the right to repay its campaign debts in full, at any time. Pp. 3–6.

(b) The Government next argues that although appellees would have standing to challenge the FEC’s implementing regulation, §116.11, they do not have standing to challenge Section 304 itself. The Government contends that the Committee used pre-election funds to repay the first $250,000, and thus Section 304’s cap on using post-election funds to repay a candidate’s loan does not prohibit repayment of the final $10,000 here. Instead, it is the agency’s regulation—with its 20-day limit—that prevents repayment. Appellees insist that they used post-election funds—in the form of overlimit contributions to the 2018 campaign that were “redesignated” as contributions to the 2024 campaign—to repay Cruz’s loans. Ordinarily, it would not matter whether a plaintiff was challenging the statute’s enforcement or instead the enforcement of a regulation. Here, however, the parties assume that the distinction makes a difference because the subject-matter jurisdiction of the three-judge District Court is limited to actions challenging the enforcement of the statute. See BCRA §304(a). Even under the Government’s account, the present inability of the Committee to repay and Cruz to recover the final $10,000 is traceable to the operation of Section 304 itself. An agency’s regulation cannot “operate independently of” the statute that authorized it. California v. Texas, 593 U. S. ___, ___. Here, the FEC’s 20-day rule was expressly promulgated to implement Section 304. Thus, if Section 304 is invalid and unenforceable, the agency’s 20-day rule is as well, and the remedy appellees sought in the District Court would redress appellees’ harm by preventing enforcement of the agency’s 20-day rule. See Lujan, 504 U. S., at 561. In challenging the FEC’s threatened enforcement of the loan-repayment limitation, through its implementing regulation, appellees may raise constitutional claims against Section 304, the statutory provision that, through the agency’s regulation, is being enforced. Cf. Collins v. Yellen, 594 U. S. ___, ___–___. And because they are challenging “the constitutionality of [a] provision of [BCRA],” §403(a), jurisdiction was proper in the three-judge District Court. Pp. 6–10.

2. Section 304 of BCRA burdens core political speech without proper justification. Pp. 10–22.

(a) The loan-repayment limitation abridges First Amendment rights by burdening candidates who wish to make expenditures on behalf of their own candidacy through personal loans. Restricting the sources of funds that campaigns may use to repay candidate loans increases the risk that such loans will not be repaid in full, which, in turn, deters candidates from loaning money to their campaigns. This burden is no small matter. Debt is a ubiquitous tool for financing electoral campaigns, especially for new candidates and challengers. By inhibiting a candidate from using this critical source of campaign funding, Section 304 raises a barrier to entry—thus abridging political speech. Pp. 10–13.

(b) The Government has not demonstrated that the loan-repayment limitation furthers a permissible goal. Any law that burdens First Amendment freedoms, even slightly, must be justified by a permissible interest. Pp. 13–22.

(i) The only permissible ground for restricting political speech recognized by this Court is the prevention of “quid pro quo” corruption or its appearance. See McCutcheon v. Federal Election Comm’n, 572 U. S. 185, 207. Here, the Government argues that the contributions at issue raise a heightened risk of corruption because they are used to repay a candidate's personal loans. But given that these contributions are already capped at $2,900 per election in order to prevent corruption or its appearance, the approach of adding an additional layer of regulation is a significant indicator that the regulation may not be necessary for the interest it seeks to protect. See id., at 221. Because the Government is defending a restriction on speech, it must do more than "simply posit the existence of the disease sought to be cured"; it must instead point to "record evidence or legislative findings" demonstrating the need to address a special problem. Colorado Republican Federal Campaign Comm. v. Federal Election Comm'n, 518 U. S. 604, 618. "[M]ere conjecture" is "[in]adequate to carry a First Amendment burden." McCutcheon, 572 U. S., at 210. Yet the Government is unable to identify a single case of quid pro quo corruption in this context, even though most States do not impose a limit on the use of post-election contributions to repay candidate loans. Pp. 13–16.

(ii) In the absence of direct evidence, the Government turns to a scholarly article, a poll, and statements by Members of Congress to show that the contributions used to repay candidate loans carry a heightened risk of at least the appearance of corruption. All of this evidence, however, concerns the sort of "corruption," loosely conceived, that this Court has repeatedly explained is not legitimately regulated under the First Amendment. Nor is it equivalent to "legislative findings" that demonstrate the need to address a special problem. Pp. 16–19.

(iii) As a fallback argument, the Government analogizes post-election contributions used to repay a candidate's loans to gifts because they enrich the candidate as opposed to the campaign's treasury. But this analogy is meaningful only if the baseline is that the campaign will default. The record suggests, however, that winning candidates are commonly repaid in full. For these candidates, post-election contributions bear little resemblance to a gift; they instead restore the candidate to the status quo ante. As for losing candidates, the Government does not provide any anticorruption rationale to explain why contributions to those candidates should be restricted. Finally, the Government argues for deference to Congress's "legislative judgment" that Section 304 furthers an anticorruption goal. Given scant evidence of corruption, deference to Congress would be especially inappropriate where, as here, the legislative act may have been an effort to "insulate[] legislators from effective electoral challenge." Nixon v. Shrink Missouri Government PAC, 528 U. S. 377, 404 (BREYER, J., concurring). In the end, it remains the role of this Court to decide whether a particular legislative choice is constitutional. Sable Communications of Cal., Inc. v. FCC, 492 U. S. 115, 129. Pp. 19–22.

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

No. 21–12

FEDERAL ELECTION COMMISSION, APPELLANT v.
TED CRUZ FOR SENATE, ET AL.

ON APPEAL FROM THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

[May 16, 2022]

CHIEF JUSTICE ROBERTS delivered the opinion of the Court.

In order to jumpstart a fledgling campaign or finish strong in a tight race, candidates for federal office often loan money to their campaign committees. A provision of federal law regulates the repayment of such loans. Among other things, it bars campaigns from using more than $250,000 of funds raised after election day to repay a candidate’s personal loans. This limit on the use of post-election funds increases the risk that candidate loans over $250,000 will not be repaid in full, inhibiting candidates from making such loans in the first place. The question is whether this restriction violates the First Amendment rights of candidates and their campaigns to engage in political speech.

Candidates for federal office may, consistent with federal law, use various sources to fund their campaigns. A candidate may spend an unlimited amount of his own money in support of his campaign. See Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U. S. 1, 52–54 (1976) (per curiam). His campaign—a legal entity distinct from the candidate himself—may borrow an unlimited amount from third-party lenders or from the candidate himself. See 11 CFR §110.10 (2017); 52 U.S.C. §30101(9)(A)(i); see also Buckley, 424 U.S., at 52–54. And campaigns may, of course, accept contributions directly from other organizations or from individuals, subject to monetary limitations. Individual contributions are capped at $2,900 for the primary and $2,900 for the general election. See §§30116(a), (c); 86 Fed. Reg. 7869 (2021). Campaigns may continue to receive contributions after election day, so long as those contributions go toward repaying campaign debts. See 11 CFR §110.1(b)(3)(i).

Opinion of the Court

Section 304 of the Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act of 2002 (BCRA), 116 Stat. 98, 52 U.S.C. §30116(j), further restricts the use of post-election funds. Under that provision, a candidate who loans money to his campaign may not be repaid more than $250,000 of such loans from contributions made to the campaign after the date of the election. Ibid. To implement that limit, the Federal Election Commission (FEC) has promulgated regulations establishing three rules pertinent here: First, a campaign may repay up to $250,000 in candidate loans using contributions made “at any time before, on, or after the date of the election.” 11 CFR §116.12(a). Second, to the extent the loans exceed $250,000, a campaign may use pre-election funds to repay the portion exceeding $250,000 only if the repayment occurs “within 20 days of the election.” §116.11(c)(1). And third, if more than $250,000 remains unpaid when the 20-day post-election deadline expires, the campaign must treat the portion above $250,000 as a contribution to the campaign, precluding later repayment. §116.11(c)(2).

Appellee Ted Cruz represents Texas in the United States Senate. This case arises from his 2018 reelection campaign, which was, at the time, the most expensive Senate race in history. Before election day, Cruz loaned $260,000 to the other appellee here, Ted Cruz for Senate (Committee). At the end of election day, however, the Committee was in the red by approximately $340,000. App. 285. It eventually began repaying Cruz’s loans, but by that time the 20-day post-election window for repaying amounts over $250,000 had closed. See 11 CFR §§116.11(c)(1), (2). The Committee accordingly repaid Cruz only $250,000, leaving $10,000 of his personal loans unpaid.

Cruz and the Committee filed this action in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, alleging that Section 304 of BCRA violates the First Amendment. They also raised challenges to the FEC’s implementing regulation, 11 CFR §116.11. A three-judge panel was convened to hear the case. See BCRA §403(a)(1), 116 Stat. 113; see also 28 U. S. C. §2284.

The three-judge District Court granted Cruz and his Committee summary judgment on their constitutional claim, holding that the loan-repayment limitation burdens political speech without sufficient justification. 542 F. Supp. 3d 1 (2021). The District Court also ordered that appellees’ challenges to the regulation, previously held in abeyance, be dismissed as moot. The Government appealed directly to this Court, as authorized by 28 U. S. C. §1253. We postponed consideration of our jurisdiction. 594 U. S. ____ (2021).

II

The Constitution limits federal courts to deciding “Cases” and “Controversies.” Art. III, §2. Among other things, that limitation requires a plaintiff to have standing. The requisite elements of Article III standing are well established: A plaintiff must show (1) an injury in fact, (2) fairly traceable to the challenged conduct of the defendant, (3) that is likely to be redressed by the requested relief. Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U. S. 555, 560–561 (1992).

Opinion of the Court

As the Government recognizes, the Committee's present inability to repay the final $10,000 of Cruz's loans constitutes an injury in fact both to Cruz and to his Committee. See Reply Brief 8. Cruz, of course, suffers a $10,000 pocketbook harm. See Czyzewski v. Jevic Holding Corp., 580 U. S. 451, 464 (2017). And the bar on repayment injures the Committee by preventing it from discharging its obligation to repay its debt, which may inhibit that form of financing in the future. The Government maintains, however, that these injuries are not traceable to the threatened enforcement of Section 304, for two reasons: first, because the inability to repay Cruz's loans was "self-inflicted," and second, because it is the threatened enforcement of an agency regulation, not the statute itself, that causes the harm. We address each argument in turn.

First, the Government argues that appellees lack standing because their injuries were "self-inflicted." Brief for Appellant 20. Because appellees knowingly triggered the application of the loan-repayment limitation, the Government says, any resulting injury is in essence traceable to them, not the Government. The predicate for this argument is appellees' stipulation in the District Court that "the sole and exclusive motivation behind Senator Cruz's actions in making the 2018 loan[s] and the [C]ommittee's actions in waiting to repay them was to establish the factual basis for this challenge." App. 325. At bottom, the Government asks us to recognize an exception to traceability for injuries that a party purposely incurs.

We have never recognized a rule of this kind under Article III. To the contrary, we have made clear that an injury resulting from the application or threatened application of an unlawful enactment remains fairly traceable to such application, even if the injury could be described in some sense as willingly incurred. See Evers v. Dwyer, 358 U. S. 202,

Opinion of the Court

204 (1958) (per curiam) (that the plaintiff subjected himself to discrimination “for the purpose of instituting th[e] litigation” did not defeat his standing); Havens Realty Corp. v. Coleman, 455 U. S. 363, 374 (1982) (a “tester” plaintiff posing as a renter for purposes of housing-discrimination litigation still suffered an injury under Article III).

The cases the Government cites do not alter our conclusion. In Clapper v. Amnesty Int’l USA, 568 U. S. 398 (2013), for example, the plaintiffs attempted to manufacture standing by voluntarily taking costly and burdensome measures that they said were necessary to protect the confidentiality of their communications in light of the Government surveillance policy they sought to challenge. Id., at 402. Their problem, however, was that they could not show that they had been or were likely to be subjected to that policy in any event. Id., at 416. Likewise, in Pennsylvania v. New Jersey, 426 U. S. 660 (1976) (per curiam), we held that the unilateral decisions by a group of States to reimburse their residents for taxes levied by other States was not a basis to attack the legality of those taxes. Nothing in the challenged taxes required the plaintiff States to offer reimbursements; accordingly, the financial injury those States suffered was due to their own independent response to taxes levied on others. Id., at 664. Here, by contrast, the appellees’ injuries are directly inflicted by the FEC’s threatened enforcement of the provisions they now challenge. That appellees chose to subject themselves to those provisions does not change the fact that they are subject to them, and will face genuine legal penalties if they do not comply. See 52 U. S. C. §30109(a)(5); 11 CFR §111.24.

One final point bears mentioning. The Government maintains that it should not be blamed for appellees’ injuries because it provided the Committee with a legally available “alternative” that would have avoided any liability—repaying Cruz’s loans in full with pre-election funds, within 20 days of the election. But even if such funds were available, the Government's argument largely misses the point. For standing purposes, we accept as valid the merits of appellees' legal claims, so we must assume that the loan-repayment limitation—including the 20-day rule—unconstitutionally burdens speech. See Warth v. Seldin, 422 U. S. 490, 500 (1975) (“standing in no way depends on the merits of the plaintiff's contention that particular conduct is illegal”). Demanding that the Committee comply with the Government's “alternative” would therefore require it to forgo the exercise of a First Amendment right we must assume it has—the right to repay its campaign debts in full, at any time. And this would require the Committee to subject itself to the very framework it says unconstitutionally burdens its speech. Such a principle finds no support in our standing jurisprudence. See, e.g., Susan B. Anthony List v. Driehaus, 573 U. S. 149, 158–159 (2014).

The Government next asserts that although appellees would have standing to challenge the FEC's implementing regulation, 11 CFR §116.11, they do not have standing to challenge Section 304 itself. As a reminder, Section 304 prohibits the use of post-election funds to repay a candidate's personal loans; it does not restrict the use of funds raised before the election. See 52 U. S. C. §30116(j). That restriction comes instead from Section 304's implementing regulation, 11 CFR §116.11. This regulation provides that neither pre-election nor post-election funds may be used to repay candidate loans above $250,000 outstanding 20 days after the election. §§116.11(c)(1)–(2). Such amounts must instead be treated as contributions to the campaign, barring their repayment.

Bearing that in mind, the Government contends that the record before the District Court reveals that the Committee used funds raised before the election to repay the first $250,000 of Cruz’s loans. For support, it naturally points to appellees’ stipulation that “none of the $250,000 of the loan that was repaid was from contributions raised after the election.” App. 329. Thus, the Government says, the Committee has not yet reached the cap in Section 304 on the use of post-election funds, and can still repay the remaining balance without running afoul of that statutory restriction. It is instead the agency’s regulation—with its 20-day limit—that prevents repayment of the final $10,000. This matters, the Government insists, because “[s]tanding is not dispensed in gross,” and plaintiffs must establish standing separately for each claim that they press and each form of relief that they seek. Brief for Appellant 17 (quoting TransUnion LLC v. Ramirez, 594 U. S. ___, ___ (2021) (slip op., at 15)). A challenge to the regulation, the Government argues, is separate from a challenge to the statute that authorized it.

Opinion of the Court

For their part, appellees insist that the record, properly interpreted, shows that the Committee used post-election funds to repay Cruz. During the period between election day and when the Committee repaid Cruz’s loans, the Committee received more than $250,000 in “redesignated” contributions to Cruz’s 2024 campaign. Those contributions came from individuals who donated to the 2018 election in amounts exceeding their base limit and who, subsequent to the election, redesignated the overlimit amount to the 2024 campaign. See 11 CFR §110.1(b)(5). Such funds, appellees say, qualify as “post-election contributions” for purposes of Section 304, and may have been used to repay the first $250,000 of Cruz’s loans. See §116.12(a).

These arguments have an Alice in Wonderland air about them, with the Government arguing that appellees would not violate the statute by repaying Cruz, and the appellees arguing that they would. But this case has unfolded in an unusual way. After all, Cruz and the Committee likely would have had standing to bring a pre-enforcement challenge (as they do now) to Section 304 in a much easier manner—by simply alleging and credibly demonstrating that Cruz wished to loan his campaign an amount larger than $250,000, but would not do so only because the loan-repayment limitation made it unlikely that such amount would be repaid. See Susan B. Anthony List, 573 U. S., at 158–159. In addition, it ordinarily would not matter whether a plaintiff was challenging the statute’s enforcement or instead the enforcement of a regulation and, in doing so, raising arguments about the validity of the statute that authorized the regulation. Cf. Collins v. Yellen, 594 U. S. ___, ___–___ (2021) (slip op., at 18–19). The parties here, however, assume that the distinction makes a difference because the subject-matter jurisdiction of the three-judge District Court is limited to actions challenging the enforcement of the statute. See BCRA §403(a) (authorizing a three-judge court to hear any “action . . . brought for declaratory or injunctive relief to challenge the constitutionality of any provision of this Act or any amendment made by this Act”).

It seems to us that the Government is likely correct that appellees have not shown that they exhausted Section 304’s cap on the use of post-election funds. The loan-repayment limitation applies to contributions “made” after the date of the election. 52 U. S. C. §30116(j). And a contribution is “considered to be made when the contributor relinquishes control” over it, which occurs when the contribution is “delivered” to the Committee or the candidate. 11 CFR §110.1(b)(6). The redesignated contributions on which appellees now rely, however, involve funds that were delivered to the Committee before the 2018 election. And those funds have remained under the Committee’s control from that date, even if they were later redesignated to a different campaign.

But we need not go further down this rabbit hole. Even under the Government’s account, appellees have standing to challenge the threatened enforcement of Section 304. The present inability of the Committee to repay and Cruz to recover the final $10,000 Cruz loaned his campaign is, even if brought about by the agency’s threatened enforcement of its regulation, traceable to the operation of Section 304 itself. An agency, after all, “literally has no power to act”—including under its regulations—unless and until Congress authorizes it to do so by statute. Louisiana Pub. Serv. Comm’n v. FCC, 476 U. S. 355, 374 (1986); see also FDA v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., 529 U. S. 120, 161 (2000). An agency’s regulation cannot “operate independently of” the statute that authorized it. California v. Texas, 593 U. S. ___, ___ (2021) (slip op., at 15). And here, the FEC’s 20-day rule was expressly promulgated to implement Section 304. See 68 Fed. Reg. 3973 (2003). Indeed, the Government admitted at oral argument that it could find no other basis to authorize enforcement of this regulation, Tr. of Oral Arg. 5, and “concede[d]” that “the most likely result, if the statute were declared invalid, is that the regulation would cease to be on the books or would cease to be enforceable,” ibid. Thus, if Section 304 is invalid and unenforceable—as Cruz and the Committee contend—the agency’s 20-day rule is as well. And the remedy appellees sought in the District Court—an order enjoining the Government from taking any action to enforce the loan-repayment limitation, App. 27—would redress appellees’ harm by preventing enforcement of the agency’s 20-day rule. See Lujan, 504 U. S., at 561.

Contrary to the Government’s suggestion, the foregoing analysis does not call into question the principle that “a plaintiff injured by one law does not thereby acquire standing to challenge a different law.” Brief for Appellant 17. It is true that a litigant cannot, “by virtue of his standing to challenge one government action, challenge other governmental actions that did not injure him.” DaimlerChrysler

Opinion of the Court

Corp. v. Cuno, 547 U. S. 332, 353, n. 5 (2006). Here, however, appellees seek to challenge the one Government action that causes their harm: the FEC's threatened enforcement of the loan-repayment limitation, through its implementing regulation. In doing so, they may raise constitutional claims against Section 304, the statutory provision that, through the agency's regulation, is being enforced. Cf. Collins, 594 U. S., at ___—___ (slip op., at 18–19). Even on the Government's version of the facts, then, we are satisfied that appellees have standing to challenge the threatened enforcement of Section 304. And because they are challenging “the constitutionality of [a] provision of [BCRA],” §403(a), jurisdiction was proper in the three-judge District Court. We thus proceed to the merits.

III

The First Amendment “has its fullest and most urgent application precisely to the conduct of campaigns for political office.” Monitor Patriot Co. v. Roy, 401 U. S. 265, 272 (1971). It safeguards the ability of a candidate to use personal funds to finance campaign speech, protecting his freedom “to speak without legislative limit on behalf of his own candidacy.” Buckley, 424 U. S., at 54. This broad protection, we have explained, “reflects our profound national commitment to the principle that debate on public issues should be uninhibited, robust, and wide-open.” Id., at 14 (internal quotation marks omitted).

The Government seems to agree with appellees that the loan-repayment limitation abridges First Amendment rights, at least to some extent, see Brief for Appellant 27–32, and we reach the same conclusion. This provision, by design and effect, burdens candidates who wish to make expenditures on behalf of their own candidacy through personal loans. See 52 U. S. C. §30101(9)(A)(i) (defining “expenditure” to include loans); see also Buckley, 424 U. S., at 52. By restricting the sources of funds that campaigns may use to repay candidate loans, Section 304 increases the risk that such loans will not be repaid. That in turn inhibits candidates from loaning money to their campaigns in the first place, burdening core speech.

The data bear out the deterrent effect of Section 304. After BCRA was passed, there appeared a “clear clustering of [candidate] loans right at the $250,000 threshold.” A. Ovtchinnikov & P. Valta, Debt in Political Campaigns 26 (2020), Record 65–1 (Ovtchinnikov, Debt); see also Brief for United States Senator Roy Blunt et al. as Amici Curiae 6–7. There was no such clustering before the loan-repayment limitation went into effect. The Government’s evidence in the District Court, moreover, reflects that the percentage of loans by Senate candidates for exactly $250,000 has increased tenfold since BCRA was passed. See App. 312–313. Section 304, then, has altered “the propensity of many politicians to make large loans.” Ovtchinnikov, Debt 26; see also Brief for Protect the First Foundation as Amicus Curiae 10–11. In doing so, it has predictably restricted a candidate’s speech on behalf of his own candidacy. See Buckley, 424 U. S., at 54.

Quite apart from this record evidence, the burden on First Amendment expression is “evident and inherent” in the choice that candidates and their campaigns must confront. Arizona Free Enterprise Club’s Freedom Club PAC v. Bennett, 564 U. S. 721, 745 (2011); see also id., at 746 (“we do not need empirical evidence to determinate that the law at issue is burdensome”); Davis v. Federal Election Comm’n, 554 U. S. 724, 738–740 (2008) (requiring no empirical evidence of a burden). Although Section 304 “does not impose a cap on a candidate’s expenditure of personal funds, it imposes an unprecedented penalty on any candidate who robustly exercises that First Amendment right.” Id., at 738–739. That penalty, of course, is the significant risk that a candidate will not be repaid if he chooses to loan his campaign more than $250,000. And that risk in turn may deter some candidates from loaning money to their campaigns when they otherwise would, reducing the amount of political speech. This “drag” on a candidate’s First Amendment right to use his own money to facilitate political speech is no less burdensome “simply because it attaches as a consequence of a statutorily imposed choice.” Id., at 739.

The “drag,” moreover, is no small matter. Debt is a ubiquitous tool for financing electoral campaigns. The raw dollar amount of loans made to campaigns in any one election cycle is in the nine figures, “significantly exceeding” the amount of independent expenditures. Ovtchinnikov, Debt 11. And personal loans from candidates themselves constitute the bulk of this financing. See Brief for Appellant 35 (“more than 90% of campaign debt consists of candidate loans”). In fact, candidates who self-fund usually do so using personal loans. See J. Steen, Self-Financed Candidates in Congressional Elections 21 (2006).

The ability to lend money to a campaign is especially important for new candidates and challengers. As a practical matter, personal loans will sometimes be the only way for an unknown challenger with limited connections to front-load campaign spending. See G. Jacobson, Money in Congressional Elections 97–101 (1980). And early spending—and thus early expression—is critical to a newcomer’s success. See Steen, Self-Financed Candidates in Congressional Elections, at 35, 171. A large personal loan also may be a useful tool to signal that the political outsider is confident enough in his campaign to have skin in the game, attracting the attention of donors and voters alike. See R. Biersack, P. Herrnson, C. Wilcox, Seeds for Success: Early Money in Congressional Elections, 18 Leg. Studies Q. 535, 537 (1993); see also Brief for United States Senator Roy Blunt et al. as Amici Curiae 13. By inhibiting a candidate from using this critical source of campaign funding, however, Section 304 raises a barrier to entry—thus abridging political speech.

The dissent cannot and does not claim that Section 304 imposes no burden on candidate speech. See post, at 5 (opinion of KAGAN, J.) (“every contribution regulation has some kind of indirect effect on electoral speech”). The dissent instead dismisses that burden as minor and insignificant. Post, at 4–6. As just explained, the extent of the burden may vary depending on the circumstances of a particular candidate and particular election. But there is no doubt that the law does burden First Amendment electoral speech, and any such law must at least be justified by a permissible interest. See McCutcheon v. Federal Election Comm’n, 572 U. S. 185, 210 (2014) (plurality opinion) (“When the Government restricts speech, the Government bears the burden of proving the constitutionality of its actions.”).

With those First Amendment costs in mind, we turn to whether the loan-repayment limitation is justified. The parties debate whether strict or “closely drawn” scrutiny should apply in answering that question. Buckley, 424 U. S., at 25. We need not resolve this dispute because, under either standard, the Government must prove at the outset that it is in fact pursuing a legitimate objective. See McCutcheon, 572 U. S., at 210. It has not done so here.

This Court has recognized only one permissible ground for restricting political speech: the prevention of “quid pro quo” corruption or its appearance. See id., at 207; see also Federal Election Comm’n v. National Conservative Political Action Comm., 470 U. S. 480, 497 (1985). We have consistently rejected attempts to restrict campaign speech based on other legislative aims. For example, we have denied attempts to reduce the amount of money in politics, see McCutcheon, 572 U. S., at 191, to level electoral opportunities by equalizing candidate resources, see Bennett, 564 U. S., at 749–750, and to limit the general influence a contributor may have over an elected official, see Citizens United v. Federal Election Comm'n, 558 U. S. 310, 359–360 (2010). However well intentioned such proposals may be, the First Amendment—as this Court has repeatedly emphasized—prohibits such attempts to tamper with the “right of citizens to choose who shall govern them.” McCutcheon, 572 U. S., at 227; see also Davis, 554 U. S., at 742; Bennett, 564 U. S., at 750.

The Government argues that the contributions at issue raise a heightened risk of corruption because of the use to which they are put: repaying a candidate’s personal loans. It also maintains that post-election contributions are particularly troubling because the contributor will know—not merely hope—that the recipient, having prevailed, will be in a position to do him some good.

We greet the assertion of an anticorruption interest here with a measure of skepticism, for the loan-repayment limitation is yet another in a long line of “prophylaxis-upon-prophylaxis approach[es]” to regulating campaign finance. McCutcheon, 572 U. S., at 221 (quoting Federal Election Comm'n v. Wisconsin Right to Life, Inc., 551 U. S. 449, 479 (2007) (opinion of ROBERTS, C. J.)). Individual contributions to candidates for federal office, including those made after the candidate has won the election, are already regulated in order to prevent corruption or its appearance. Such contributions are capped at $2,900 per election, see 86 Fed. Reg. 7869, and nontrivial contributions must be publicly disclosed, see 52 U. S. C. §§30104(b)(3)(A), (c)(1). The dissent’s dire predictions about the impact of today’s decision elide the fact that the contributions at issue remain subject to these requirements. See post, at 3, 14–15. And the requirements are themselves prophylactic measures, given that “few if any contributions to candidates will involve quid pro quo arrangements.” Citizens United, 558 U. S., at 357. Such a prophylaxis-upon-prophylaxis approach, we have explained, is a significant indicator that the regulation may not be necessary for the interest it seeks to protect. See McCutcheon, 572 U. S., at 221; see also Bennett, 564 U. S., at 752 (“In the face of [the State’s] contribution limits [and] strict disclosure requirements . . . it is hard to imagine what marginal corruption deterrence could be generated by [an additional measure].”).

There is no cause for a different conclusion here. Because the Government is defending a restriction on speech as necessary to prevent an anticipated harm, it must do more than “simply posit the existence of the disease sought to be cured.” Colorado Republican Federal Campaign Comm. v. Federal Election Comm’n, 518 U. S. 604, 618 (1996). It must instead point to “record evidence or legislative findings” demonstrating the need to address a special problem. Ibid. We have “never accepted mere conjecture as adequate to carry a First Amendment burden.” McCutcheon, 572 U. S., at 210 (quoting Nixon v. Shrink Missouri Government PAC, 528 U. S. 377, 392 (2000)).

Yet the Government is unable to identify a single case of quid pro quo corruption in this context—even though most States do not impose a limit on the use of post-election contributions to repay candidate loans. Cf. Brief for Campaign Legal Center et al. as Amici Curiae 17–18 (citing the 10 States that do impose such a prohibition). Our previous cases have found the absence of such evidence significant. See Citizens United, 558 U. S., at 357 (the Government did not claim that the political process was corrupted in the 26 States that allowed unrestricted independent expenditures by corporations); McCutcheon, 572 U. S., at 209, n. 7 (the Government presented no evidence of corruption in the 30 States that did not impose aggregate limits on individual contributions).

The Government instead puts forward a handful of media reports and anecdotes that it says illustrate the special risks associated with repaying candidate loans after an election. But as the District Court found, those reports “merely hypothesize that individuals who contribute after the election to help retire a candidate’s debt might have greater influence with or access to the candidate.” 542 F. Supp. 3d, at 15. That is not the type of quid pro quo corruption the Government may target consistent with the First Amendment. See McCutcheon, 572 U. S., at 207–208.

The dissent at points shrugs off this distinction, see post, at 2, 12, n. 3, 13, but our cases make clear that “the Government may not seek to limit the appearance of mere influence or access.” McCutcheon, 572 U. S., at 208. As we have explained, influence and access “embody a central feature of democracy—that constituents support candidates who share their beliefs and interests, and candidates who are elected can be expected to be responsive to those concerns.” Id., at 192.

To be sure, the “line between quid pro quo corruption and general influence may seem vague at times, but the distinction must be respected in order to safeguard basic First Amendment rights.” Id., at 209. And in drawing that line, “the First Amendment requires us to err on the side of protecting political speech rather than suppressing it.” Ibid. (quoting Wisconsin Right to Life, 551 U. S., at 457 (opinion of ROBERTS, C. J.)).

In the absence of direct evidence, the Government turns elsewhere. It contends that a scholarly article, a poll, and statements by Members of Congress show that these contributions carry a heightened risk of at least the appearance of corruption. Essentially all the Government’s evidence, however, concerns the sort of “corruption,” loosely conceived, that we have repeatedly explained is not legitimately regulated under the First Amendment.

The academic article—cited for various propositions by both sides—concludes that “indebted politicians” are “more likely to switch their votes” if they receive contributions from the banking or insurance industries. Ovtchinnikov, Debt 31. But the authors explicitly note that they cannot distinguish between voting pattern changes traceable to legitimate donor influence or access, and voting pattern changes as part of an illicit quid pro quo. See A. Ovtchinnikov & P. Valta, Self-Funding of Political Campaigns, Management Science, Articles in Advance 18 (April 7, 2022) (Ovtchinnikov, Self-Funding). As noted, our precedents demand adherence to that distinction. See, e.g., McCutcheon, 572 U. S., at 209. The authors also state that their analysis is merely a “first step” in understanding whether politicians’ self-funding decisions impact voting behavior, because they cannot “pin down a causal link” yet. Ovtchinnikov, Self-Funding 21.

The online poll the Government asks us to consider similarly misses the mark. The poll, conducted at the Government’s behest for this litigation, reports that most respondents thought it “very likely” or “likely” that a person who “donate[s] money to a candidate’s campaign after the election expect[s] a political favor in return.” App. 351–352. But it failed to ask whether those same respondents thought it likely that donors who contribute to a campaign before the election also are likely to expect political favors in return. Nor did the poll mention that the individual base limits still apply to such contributions. And it failed to define the term “political favor,” leaving unclear the critical issue whether the respondents associated such contributions with the direct exchange of money for official acts, which Congress may regulate, or simply increased influence and access, which Congress may not.

Finally, the Government places great weight on statements made by certain Members of Congress during debates that preceded the enactment of BCRA. One Senator, for example, remarked that without the loan-repayment limitation, a winning candidate who loaned money to his campaign could “get it back from [his] constituents [at] fundraising events” where he could ask, “How would you like me to vote now that I am a Senator?” 147 Cong. Rec. S2462 (March 19, 2001) (remarks of Sen. Domenici). Another stated that candidates “have a constitutional right to try to buy the office, but they do not have a constitutional right to resell it.” 147 Cong. Rec. S2541 (March 20, 2001) (remarks of Sen. Hutchison). Nothing these legislators said, however, constitutes actual evidence that the loan-repayment limitation was necessary to prevent quid pro quo corruption or its appearance. And a few stray floor statements are not the same as “legislative findings” that might suggest a special problem to be addressed. Colorado Republican Federal Campaign Comm., 518 U. S., at 618.

All the above is pretty meager, given that we are considering restrictions on “the most fundamental First Amendment activities”—the right of candidates for political office to make their case to the American people. Buckley, 434 U. S., at 14. In any event, the legislative record helps appellees just as much as the Government, given that some Senators evidently viewed the limit as designed to protect incumbents like themselves from wealthy challengers. See 147 Cong. Rec. S2465 (March 19, 2001) (remarks of Sen. Sessions) (“[Section 304] prohibits wealthy candidates, who incur personal loans in connection with their campaign that exceed $250,000, from repaying those loans from any contributions made to the candidate. . . . I am glad I didn’t face a person who could write a check for $60 million, $10 million—or $5 million, for that matter. If so, I would like to be able to have a level playing field so I could stay in the ball game.”); see also 147 Cong. Rec. S2541 (March 20, 2001) (remarks of Sen. Hutchison) (“Our purpose is to level the playing field.”).

That the limit may have been designed to protect incumbents should come as no surprise. Section 304 was enacted as part of the “Millionaire’s Amendment” to BCRA, designed to hobble wealthy candidates mounting self-financed campaigns. See Davis, 554 U. S., at 739. And it was debated together with another provision we have already held unconstitutional, in part because it pursued the same impermissible goal of “level[ing] electoral opportunities for candidates of different personal wealth.” Id., at 741. The connection between these two provisions casts further doubt on the anticorruption interest the Government now asserts in this case.

Perhaps to make up for its evidentiary shortcomings, the Government falls back on what it calls a “common sense” analogy: Post-election contributions used to repay a candidate’s loans are akin to a “gift” because they “add to the candidate’s personal wealth” as opposed to the campaign’s treasury. Brief for Appellant 33. The risk of corruption is thus greater, the Government argues, because the donor is lining the pockets of a legislator or legislator-elect.

The dissent at multiple points makes the same argument, contending that contributions that go toward repaying a candidate’s loan “enrich the candidate personally,” allowing him to “buy a car or make tuition payments or join a country club.” Post, at 7, 14; see also post, at 2, 3, 8, 13. But this forgets that we are talking about repayment of a loan, not a gift. If the candidate did not have the money to buy a car before he made a loan to his campaign, repayment of the loan would not change that in any way.

On top of that, contributions that go toward retiring a candidate's debt could only arguably enrich the candidate if the candidate does not otherwise expect to be repaid. In other words, the Government's gift comparison is meaningful only if the baseline is that the campaign will default. The Government, however, provides no reason to believe that most or even many winning candidates—the only candidates with whom its anticorruption interest is concerned—expect not to be repaid by their campaigns. To the contrary, the Government has recognized throughout this litigation that winning candidates are commonly repaid in full. See App. 31–32 (citing the former FEC Commissioner's statement that “only winners have an easy time dealing with debt”); id., at 317 (same); see also Ovtchinnikov, Self-Funding 11 (concluding that, even with BCRA's limitations on loan repayment in place, two out of three winning campaigns were able to repay a candidate's loans in full). For such a candidate, then, post-election contributions bear little resemblance to a gift, because there is less of a chance that his campaign will default. Such contributions instead restore the candidate to the status quo ante, a position to which he legitimately expected to return. As for losing candidates, they are of course in no position to grant official favors, and the Government does not provide any anticorruption rationale to explain why post-election contributions to those candidates should be restricted. See Brief for Appellant 45–46.

The analogy also proves too much. By the Government's logic, post-election contributions to retire candidate loans are little different from gifts given directly to the candidate. But that logic is belied by how the Government treats the two categories of purported “gifts.” On the one hand, federal law flatly prohibits candidates from using campaign contributions for personal purposes. See 52 U. S. C. §30114(b)(2). And it forbids Senators from accepting gifts worth $250 or more. See 2 U. S. C. §4725(a)(1). By contrast, the postulated “gift-by-loan-repayment” limits are simply the individual contribution limits, which are now more than ten times higher than the gift limit: $2,900 per election. And Section 304 allows over 86 such “gifts” before a campaign hits the Act’s $250,000 cap. Either the Government is openly tolerating a significant number of “gifts” far more generous than what it would normally think fit to allow, or post-election contributions that go toward retiring campaign debt are in no real sense “gifts” to a candidate. We find the latter answer more persuasive.

As a final argument, the Government claims that if the matter is otherwise in doubt, we should defer to Congress’s “legislative judgment” that Section 304 furthers an anticorruption goal. Brief for Appellant 39; see also post, at 8 (KAGAN, J., dissenting) (also arguing that we have no “reason to second-guess Congress’s experience-based judgment”). Such deference, the Government contends, is grounded “in part on the understanding that Congress ‘is far better equipped than the judiciary to amass and evaluate the vast amounts of data bearing upon legislative questions.’” Brief for Appellant 40 (quoting Turner Broadcasting System, Inc. v. FCC, 520 U. S. 180, 195 (1997) (some internal quotation marks omitted)). But as explained, the evidence here is scant, and Congress’s judgment is hardly based on “vast amounts of data.” Id., at 195. Moreover, deference to Congress would be especially inappropriate where, as here, the legislative act may have been an effort to “insulate[] legislators from effective electoral challenge.” Shrink Missouri Government PAC, 528 U. S., at 404 (BREYER, J., concurring); see also Randall v. Sorrell, 548 U. S. 230, 248–249 (2006) (plurality opinion).

In the end, it remains our role to decide whether a particular legislative choice is constitutional. See Sable Communications of Cal., Inc. v. FCC, 492 U. S. 115, 129 (1989); see also Randall, 548 U. S., at 248–249 (stressing need for “the exercise of independent judicial judgment” in case raising concern that “contribution limits that are too low [may] harm the electoral process by preventing challengers from mounting effective campaigns against incumbent officeholders”). And here the Government has not shown that Section 304 furthers a permissible anticorruption goal, rather than the impermissible objective of simply limiting the amount of money in politics.

Opinion of the Court

For the reasons set forth, we conclude that Cruz and the Committee have standing to challenge the threatened enforcement of Section 304 of BCRA. We also conclude that this provision burdens core political speech without proper justification. The judgment of the District Court is affirmed.

It is so ordered.

KAGAN, J., dissenting

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

No. 21–12

FEDERAL ELECTION COMMISSION, APPELLANT v.
TED CRUZ FOR SENATE, ET AL.

ON APPEAL FROM THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR
THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

[May 16, 2022]

JUSTICE KAGAN, with whom JUSTICE BREYER and JUSTICE SOTOMAYOR join, dissenting.

A candidate for public office extends a $500,000 loan to his campaign organization, hoping to recoup the amount from benefactors’ post-election contributions. Once elected, he devotes himself assiduously to recovering the money; his personal bank account, after all, now has a gaping half-million-dollar hole. The politician solicits donations from wealthy individuals and corporate lobbyists, making clear that the money they give will go straight from the campaign to him, as repayment for his loan. He is deeply grateful to those who help, as they know he will be—more grateful than for ordinary campaign contributions (which do not increase his personal wealth). And as they paid him, so he will pay them. In the coming months and years, they receive government benefits—maybe favorable legislation, maybe prized appointments, maybe lucrative contracts. The politician is happy; the donors are happy. The only loser is the public. It inevitably suffers from government corruption.

The campaign finance measure at issue here has for two decades checked the crooked exchanges just described. The provision, Section 304 of the Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act of 2002, prohibited a candidate from using post-election donations to repay loans exceeding $250,000 that he made to his campaign. The theory of the legislation is easy to grasp. Political contributions that will line a candidate's own pockets, given after his election to office, pose a special danger of corruption. The candidate has a more-than-usual interest in obtaining the money (to replenish his personal finances), and is now in a position to give something in return. The donors well understand his situation, and are eager to take advantage of it. In short, everyone's incentives are stacked to enhance the risk of dirty dealing. At the very least—even if an illicit exchange does not occur—the public will predictably perceive corruption in post-election payments directly enriching an officeholder. Congress enacted Section 304 to protect against those harms.

In striking down the law today, the Court greenlights all the sordid bargains Congress thought right to stop. The theory of the decision (unlike of the statute) is hard to fathom. The majority says that Section 304 violates the candidate's First Amendment rights by interfering with his ability to "self-fund" his campaign. Ante, at 12. But the candidate can in fact self-fund all he likes. The law impedes only his ability to use other people's money to finance his campaign—much as standard (and permissible) contribution limits do. And even that third-party restriction is a modest one, applying only to post- (not pre-) election donations to repay sizable (not small) loans. So the majority overstates the First Amendment burdens Section 304 imposes. At the same time, the majority understates the anti-corruption values Section 304 serves. In the majority's view, there is "scant" danger here of quid pro quo corruption; loan repayments produce only the "sort of 'corruption'" in which contributors wield "greater influence" over candidates than they otherwise would. Ante, at 16–17, 21. Assume away all objections to that distinction, which even the majority concedes is "vague," ante, at 16; for better or worse, it underlies this Court's recent campaign finance decisions.

KAGAN, J., dissenting

Still, the conduct targeted by Section 304 threatens, if anything does, both corruption and the appearance of corruption of the quid pro quo kind. That is because the regulated transactions—as Members of Congress well knew from experience—personally enrich those already elected to office. In allowing those payments to go forward unrestrained, today’s decision can only bring this country’s political system into further disrepute.

I

In assessing a law’s burden on speech, this Court’s decisions all distinguish between restricting expenditures and restricting contributions. See, e.g., Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U. S. 1, 19–23 (1976) (per curiam). (The majority glosses over that core distinction, for reasons that will soon become clear.) According to settled precedent, expenditure restrictions—caps on a campaign’s or candidate’s electoral spending—impose the greatest burdens on expression. The First Amendment, as the majority notes, “has its fullest and most urgent application” when a “legislative limit” prevents a candidate from “us[ing] personal funds to finance campaign speech”—that is, speech “on behalf of his own candidacy.” Ante, at 10 (internal quotation marks omitted). By contrast, laws focused on third-party contributions to a campaign (a category the majority mostly prefers to ignore) typically “entail[] only a marginal restriction” on First Amendment interests. Buckley, 424 U. S., at 20. Take, for example, a simple limit on the amount someone can donate to a campaign, like the federal $2,900 ceiling. That kind of restriction, we have reasoned, in no way interferes with the donor’s “freedom to discuss candidates and issues” through independent spending. Id., at 21. And it has only an indirect effect on the campaign itself. To be sure, the cap makes raising money (for speech and other things) harder: It forces candidates “to raise funds from a greater number” of people and generally results in the campaign taking in less money than it otherwise would. Id., at 22. But the Court has viewed such limits as troublesome only if they are so low as to prevent candidates from raising “the resources necessary for effective advocacy.” Randall v. Sorrell, 548 U. S. 230, 247 (2006) (plurality opinion) (quoting Buckley, 424 U. S., at 21). In the usual case, the incidental effect of a contribution restriction on a campaign’s speech does not count as a significant First Amendment burden. See Randall, 548 U. S., at 246–247.

Under that precedent, Section 304 “entails only a marginal restriction” on speech, because it regulates contributions alone. Buckley, 424 U. S., at 20. The provision leaves a campaign free to spend any amount of money for speech. Likewise, it leaves the candidate himself—here, Senator Ted Cruz—free to do so. The candidate can (in the majority’s words) “use personal funds to finance campaign speech” without limit; if he wishes, he can devote his whole fortune to “speech on behalf of his own candidacy.” Ante, at 10–11. Section 304 restricts only the use of third-party contributions to support his efforts—which, as just shown, imposes a far more modest First Amendment burden. Recall how Section 304 works: It prevents post-election campaign contributions from going to repay large loans that the candidate has made to his campaign. So the provision limits—much as standard contribution caps do—only the candidate’s ability to shift the costs of his electoral speech to others. Or said a bit differently, it addresses not a candidate’s “self-fund[ing],” ante, at 12, but only his reliance on third-party financing.

And even that regulation of third-party contributions is a narrow one. Under Section 304, a campaign can always accept donations for small loans a candidate makes. And it can use pre-election donations to retire even his sizable loans. The statute just insists that donations for that purpose occur when speech is ongoing, and before everyone knows which candidate won (and so is in a position to return the favor by delivering government benefits). Consistent with our caselaw, that minor restriction on a candidate's use of other people's money does not severely burden his (or anyone else's) expression.

The majority's argument to the contrary focuses not on the restriction Section 304 actually imposes, but on the indirect effects the provision might have. The majority does not dispute that Section 304 places no limits on the amount a candidate can spend for expression. See ante, at 11. Nor does (or could) the majority even claim that the provision caps what a candidate can lend his campaign. Instead, the majority argues that the law "may deter" a candidate from making large loans because it curtails a potential source of repayment—i.e., post-election donations. Ante, at 12. In that way, the majority insists, the law—though concededly regulating only the use of contributions—functions to "restrict[] a candidate's speech." Ante, at 11; see ante, at 13.

But every contribution regulation has some kind of indirect effect on electoral speech, and we have still understood them to impose only minimal burdens. Consider again a standard contribution ceiling, like the federal $2,900 cap. That limit, as we have acknowledged, makes raising money harder. See Randall, 548 U. S., at 247; Buckley, 424 U. S., at 20–21. And so it predictably gives a campaign less money to spend. (In fact, a lot less: Just think of a world in which a candidate could raise an unlimited sum from every supporter.) With the contribution cap in effect, the campaign cannot pay for (nearly) as many advertisements, mailings, signs, and so forth. And likewise, to return to the fact pattern here, the campaign has less money available than it otherwise would to repay a candidate's (or any other) loans. By the majority's logic, that downstream effect would mean the contribution cap imposes a significant First Amendment burden. But as noted above, we have always held to the contrary, save for the rare case in which the limit is so low as to preclude effective advocacy. See supra, at 3–4. There is no reason to treat Section 304 differently. In fact, its restriction on post-election contributions for loan repayment probably has much smaller indirect effects on a campaign's or candidate's speech than the contribution ceilings this Court has approved. (Again, just think of all the multi-million-dollar donations those ceilings prevent.) So the majority's view cannot be right.

And more fundamentally, the majority fails to appreciate what Section 304 has an indirect effect on: lending, rather than spending, money. In the majority's view, those two activities count as one and the same. See ante, at 10–11. But they are not, in an obvious way. The expenditure of “personal funds” for speech, this Court has observed, “reduces the candidate's dependence” on donors—precisely because he is not trying to speak on their dime. Buckley, 424 U. S., at 53. The loan of personal funds has the opposite effect, as further shown in this opinion's next part. When a candidate lends substantial funds to his campaign, he wants (maybe desperately needs) them returned; he thus risks—indeed, invites—dependence on donors, who alone can make him financially whole. Section 304 responds to that difference in whether a candidate is speaking independently, or instead relying on others' largesse. The provision at most deters a single mechanism for financing electoral activities, because it carries a heightened threat of corruption.

II

Preventing quid pro quo corruption or its appearance is a compelling interest by any measure. See Federal Election Comm'n v. National Conservative Political Action Comm., 470 U. S. 480, 496–497 (1985). Quid pro quo corruption—which extends beyond criminal bribery to “less blatant and specific” arrangements—“subver[ts] the political process” and threatens “the integrity of our system of representative democracy.” Nixon v. Shrink Missouri Government PAC, 528 U. S. 377, 388–389 (2000) (internal quotation marks omitted). And the appearance of that corruption (though scarcely mentioned in the majority opinion) is “[o]f almost equal concern.” Id., at 388. Avoiding that appearance is “critical” if public “confidence in the system of representative Government is not to be eroded to a disastrous extent.” Id., at 389.

Serious dangers of actual and apparent quid pro quo corruption attend the transactions Section 304 regulates—again, the use of post-election contributions to repay a candidate’s personal loans. Consider a simple comparison. When a campaign uses a donation to fund routine electoral activities (including speech), the money marginally aids the candidate’s electoral odds, but in no way adds to his personal wealth. By contrast, when a campaign uses a donation to repay the candidate’s loan, every dollar given goes straight into the candidate’s pocket. With each such contribution, his assets increase; he can now buy a car or make tuition payments or join a country club—all with his donors’ dollars. So contributions going to loan repayment have exceptional value to the candidate—which his donors of course realize. And when the contributions occur after the election, their corrupting potential further increases. At that time, a campaign can use donations only to repay loans, of which some 97% come from candidates. See 11 CFR 110.1(b)(3)(i) (2017); A. Ovtchinnikov & P. Valta, Self-Funding of Political Campaigns, Management Science, Articles in Advance 5 (Apr. 7, 2022) (Ovtchinnikov, Self-Funding). So post-election donors can be confident their money will enrich a candidate personally. And those donors have of course learned which candidate won. When they give money to repay the victor’s loan, they know—not merely hope—he will be in a position to perform official favors. The recipe for quid pro quo corruption is thus in place: a donation to enhance the candidate’s own wealth (the quid), made when he has become able to use the power of public office to the donor's advantage (the quo). The heightened threat of corruption—and, even more, of its appearance—is self-evident (except, it seems, to observers allergic to all campaign finance regulation).

In addressing that special danger, Section 304 is anything but a “prophylaxis-upon-prophylaxis,” as the majority labels it. Ante, at 14. The idea behind that fancy-sounding epithet is just that the statute is a needless precaution: The $2,900 contribution ceiling, the majority asserts, already provides generous protection against the corrupting potential of donations, so the loan-repayment provision is unnecessary. See ibid. But that claim ignores that Section 304 targets only a subset of contributions, which raise (as just described) unique corruption risks. When an added protection addresses an added danger, the existence of a basic protection (however ordinarily ample) fails to show the supplement's pointlessness. Regular seatbelts might suffice to protect drivers on the interstate, but special belts—and roll cages to boot—are essential measures on the racetrack. So too, a $2,900 cap might suffice to prevent corruption from normal campaign contributions—but not from post-election contributions to repay a candidate's loan, and thus to enrich him personally. When Congress, as here, responds to a heightened threat with a heightened safeguard, the majority has no call to “greet” it “with a measure of skepticism.” Ibid.

Nor does the majority have reason to second-guess Congress's experience-based judgment about the specially corrupting effects of post-election donations to repay candidate loans. The majority's first attempt to counter that judgment is that “we are only talking about repayment of a loan”: “If the candidate did not have the money to buy a car before he made a loan to his campaign, repayment of the loan would not change that in any way.” Ante, at 19. But that altogether misses the point. However much money the candidate had before he makes a loan to his campaign, he has less after it: The amount of the loan is the size of the hole in his bank account. So whatever he could buy with, say, $250,000—surely a car, but that’s beside the point—he cannot buy any longer. Until, that is, donors pay him back. Then, the hole is filled, the bank account replenished, and the purchasing power restored. That is a significant financial gain to the officeholder, courtesy of donors. If they had not stepped up, the officeholder would have been $250,000 poorer.

The majority’s second theory fares no better. Contributions to repay loans, the majority argues, do not really enrich an officeholder, because he has, from the beginning, “expect[ed] to be repaid.” Ante, at 20. But the record provides no support for that self-assured statement. Contra the majority, the Government “has recognized throughout this litigation” not that winning candidates are usually repaid, but only that they are repaid more often than losing ones. Ibid.; see App. 31–32, 317.¹ That is no surprise—and the fact is affirmatively unhelpful for the majority’s position, because it shows how post-election donations reflect an expectation of payback from the recipient. Nothing else in the record (or outside it) is helpful to the majority either. The best empirical study suggests that a substantial portion of winning campaigns fail to retire candidate loans, ¹The statement the majority quotes from a former FEC Commissioner does not support any broader understanding of the Government’s claim. That statement appears in a parenthetical to a citation for the Government’s actual argument: that winning candidates “possess a greater capacity” than losing ones do to get their loans repaid. App. 31. And the statement—that “only winners” have “an easy time dealing with debt”—means not that all or most winners do, but instead that no losers do. Id., at 31–32. The former Commissioner who made the remark had also served as counsel to a losing presidential campaign, and he was merely observing how hard that campaign had found it to repay debt. See P. Overby, How Will Clinton Resolve Campaign Debt? National Public Radio, May 14, 2008.

KAGAN, J., dissenting

even when their amounts are too small to trigger Section 304’s restrictions. See Ovtchinnikov, Self-Funding 11; see also Brief for Campaign Legal Center et al. as Amici Curiae 12–13 (summarizing research “show[ing] that most campaigns fail to pay off candidates’ personal loans in any amount at any time,” in confirmation of the “[c]onventional wisdom” that post-election fundraising is “notoriously difficult”). So a candidate with a loan outstanding has plenty of reason to feel anxious—and to see the loan’s repayment as a gratitude-inducing personal benefit. The donor takes him off a sharp hook. And even a candidate who expects repayment is far from impervious to corruption. He may have that confidence exactly because he knows that a raft of lobbyists will be eager to pay for political benefits. And with his bank account depleted, he has a great temptation to perform his part in such an exchange.²

The common sense of Section 304—the obviousness of the theory behind it—lessens the need for the Government to identify past cases of quid pro quo corruption involving candidate loan repayments. As this Court has made clear, “[t]he quantum of empirical evidence needed” to sustain a campaign finance law “var[ies] up or down with the novelty and plausibility of the [law’s] justification.” McConnell v. Federal Election Comm’n, 540 U. S. 93, 144 (2003). There ²The majority also fails to recognize that post-election contributions can go toward interest payments, enabling a candidate to turn a tidy profit on top of recovering the amount loaned. Consider the case of one member of the U. S. House Transportation and Infrastructure Committee. She loaned her campaign $150,000 at an 18% interest rate (no, that is not a typo), and over time collected more than $200,000 in interest payments. Much of that money came from fundraising events hosted by a lobbying firm representing members of the transportation industry. See A. Zajac, Interest on Campaign Loan Pays, L. A. Times, Feb. 14, 2009, p. B1. The example is extreme, but the FEC typically allows candidates to charge their campaigns—which then tap contributors for—a commercially reasonable rate of interest. See FEC, Campaign Guide for Congressional Candidates and Committees 101 (2021).

KAGAN, J., dissenting

is nothing novel or implausible about Section 304's rationale—once again, that payments going to line an elected official's pockets pose an especial risk of corruption. It is in fact what everyone knows to be true—because everyone knows people (including politicians) will often do things for money. The majority suggests that we should discard our understanding of how the world works because the Government has not come forward with adjudicated instances of corruption in the loan-repayment context. See ante, at 15–16. But quid pro quo exchanges, in that and every other setting, are nigh-impossible to detect and prove. That is indeed why we have campaign finance laws like Section 304. They prohibit conduct posing a heightened risk of corruption, so that the Government does not have to ferret out illicit exchanges case by case. To strike down Section 304 because the Government has not proved to a certainty some number of loan-repayments-for-political-paybacks is to miss the provision's essential point.

In any event, the Government and its amici have marshalled significant evidence showing that the loan repayments Section 304 targets have exactly the dangers Congress thought. See Brief for Appellant 37–40; Brief for Campaign Legal Center et al. 27–29. Here is a sampling from the record, involving jurisdictions unprotected by either Section 304 or a state equivalent. In Ohio, various law firms donated almost $200,000 to help the newly elected attorney general recoup his personal loans. Those donors later received more than 200 state contracts worth nearly $10 million in legal fees. See L. Bischoff, Donations Helping DeWine Pay Down Campaign Loan, Springfield News-Sun, Feb. 2, 2012, p. A1. In Alaska, a lobbyist collected almost $100,000 for post-election repayment of the Governor's personal loans. A business in which he held an interest later received a $9 million state contract. See B. Curry, Alaska Gov. Sheffield's Impeachment Inquiry Has Overtones of Watergate Scandal, L. A. Times, July 19, 1985, p.

KAGAN, J., dissenting

11. In Kentucky, two Governors loaned their campaigns millions of dollars, “only to be repaid after the election by contributors seeking no-bid contracts.” J. Moore, Campaign Finance Reform in Kentucky: The Race for Governor, 85 Ky. L. J. 723, 746 (1997). The scandal those transactions created led to a new state campaign-finance law similar to Section 304. In upholding that statute, a court more cognizant than this one about how corruption works explained that “heavily indebted candidates” were “easy bedfellows for quid pro quo contributors.” Wilkinson v. Jones, 876 F. Supp. 916, 930 (WD Ky. 1995). That is also true on the local level. In San Diego, to take just one instance, three city council members cast critical votes benefiting lobbyists who had raised funds to retire their campaign debts. See C. Gustafson, Lobbyists See Benefit From Three City Officials, San Diego Union-Tribune, June 13, 2009, p. A1.³

An empirical study in the record confirms the dangers of corruption shown in those examples. The study first found, based on data preceding Section 304’s enactment, that politicians carrying campaign debt were “significantly more likely” than their “debt-free counterparts” to “switch their votes” after receiving contributions from special interests. A. Ovtchinnikov & P. Valt, Debt in Political Campaigns (2020), in No. 1:19-cv-00908 (D DC, July 14, 2020), ECF ³The majority asserts without explanation that these and other similar examples involve not quid pro quo corruption, but only contributors’ exercise of their “greater influence” over candidates. Ante, at 16. Even accepting that distinction (as our caselaw does), the majority’s claim is hard to understand. Here is the quid in the examples: a donation paying off a successful candidate’s personal loan. And here is the quo: a government contract, or a key vote. However “vague” the “line between quid pro quo corruption and general influence,” ibid., those exchanges cross it. The majority must mean that the Government has not proved beyond a doubt that the trades in fact occurred. But again, that is the wrong standard given (1) the difficulty of such proof and (2) the significant risks of quid pro quo corruption inherent in the above fact patterns. See supra, at 10–11.

KAGAN, J., dissenting

Doc. 65–1, p. 31. In other words, officeholders did more in exchange for donations repaying their personal loans than for other donations. The analysis next looked at Section 304’s effect. Here, the data showed that politicians with debt exceeding the law’s $250,000 threshold became “significantly less responsive” to contributions than before: They began to “behave remarkably similar to their debt free counterparts.” Id., at 28; see Ovtchinnikov, Self-Funding 3 (similarly stating that those politicians became more “independent of contributions from special interest[s]”). In other words, Section 304 did just what Congress thought it would. By preventing post-election contributions from personally enriching politicians, the provision diminished donor-responsive voting. The majority tries to undermine those findings by quoting the kind of careful caveats always accompanying good social science. See ante, at 17; Ovtchinnikov, Self-Funding 21 (noting that the study is a “first step in understanding” and that more work is needed to “fully pin down” all aspects of causation). But the authors are confident—and rightly so—in the findings just described: that Section 304 markedly decreased the frequency with which officeholders voted as donors would like. And although the authors could not responsibly claim that all the shifted votes they tallied were part of quid pro quo deals—they are, after all, professors, not the FBI—they deduce from the data that politicians carrying campaign debt were “less likely to [be] sell[ing] access” than to be “sell[ing] votes.” Id., at 18.

Finally, the record evidence addresses the “almost equal[ly]” important matter of the appearance of corruption. Shrink Missouri, 528 U. S., at 390; see supra, at 6–7. A Government-commissioned survey of public opinion found that 81% of respondents believed it “very likely” or “likely” that a person who “donate[s] money to a candidate’s campaign after the election expect[s] a political favor in return.” App. 351–353. That bears repeating: 81%—an overwhelming perception across all demographic categories, as well as across all party affiliations and political ideologies. See ibid. As the court reviewing the Kentucky version of Section 304 explained: “[T]here is an impression” when a contribution repays a loan after an election that the contributor is simply “lining the candidate’s pocket, as there is no ongoing campaign to which the contribution may be made.” Wilkinson, 876 F. Supp., at 930; see supra, at 12. The majority flyspecks the polling questions: Why didn’t the poll define “political favor”? Did the poll mention that the contributions had to comply with the $2,900 cap? And so forth. See ante, at 17–18. But really—is it likely that such tinkering would have made a real difference? The poll results were so lopsided because the post-election contributions Section 304 targets—ones adding to the candidate’s personal wealth—have so conspicuous a potential to corrupt. The public knows that to be true. The public’s representatives in Congress knew it to be true. Only this Court—somehow—does not.

“Democracy works only if the people have faith in those who govern.” Shrink Missouri, 528 U. S., at 390 (internal quotation marks omitted). And the people cannot have faith in representatives who trade official acts for financial gain. Section 304 prevents that kind of corruption, at barely discernable cost to First Amendment freedoms. The provision limits one narrow use of third-party contributions to a campaign, thus “entail[ing] only a marginal restriction” on speech. Buckley, 424 U. S., at 20. And the provision targets a practice posing exceptional risks of quid pro quo deals. Repaying a candidate’s loan after he has won election cannot serve the usual purposes of a contribution: The money comes too late to aid in any of his campaign activities. All the money does is enrich the candidate personally at a time when he can return the favor—by a vote, a contract, an appointment. It takes no political genius to see the heightened risk of corruption—the danger of “I’ll make you richer and you’ll make me richer” arrangements between donors and officeholders. Section 304 has guarded against that threat for two decades, but no longer. In discarding the statute, the Court fuels non-public-serving, self-interested governance. It injures the integrity, both actual and apparent, of the political process. I respectfully dissent.
