Letter of interest and concept statement

This project interests me because it is an opportunity to create an uplifting, soothing and visually striking artwork in a public space. It is a powerful way to positively influence the ambience of the environment. I believe in spreading a positive message through art and hopefully be able to uplift the spirits of all who see it .

Inclusivity, compassion and harmony are my ethos, with these I strive to create a space/ ambience where all are included and feel heard and seen.

I have many years experience creating beautiful art pieces for clients, I am inspired by nature, beauty ,humanity and the fragility yet magnificence of existence. I aim to positively influence environments by using color as a form of therapy. I have experience working within time constraints and money management.

MARY ANCILLA MARTINEZ RESUME

I am a New Mexican born artist who paints the liminal...those in between spaces...the misty and mystical, wild and free ethereal places where unseen greets seen, where dark weaves light, and land meets sea and sky. I enjoy the exploration of dreams, mythology, archetypes, alchemy and metaphysics. I am deeply inspired by nature....secret whispers from the desert winds, the language of trees, the power and magnificence of animals, the dynamism of the elements, and the infinity of the stars and cosmos. My work is primarily figurative and narrative, created mainly in oils. My current focus examines personal sovereignty inspired by Greek, Celtic, Spanish, French, African and Indigenous mythology. I strive for meaning and intention in each piece, and simultaneously enjoy the engagement found in pure process. I seek a feeling of transcendence in my paintings and desire for my work to touch the viewer with a sense of the divine.

Jeni Bate ~ Skyscapes for the Soul

Artist's Statement

"I paint the skies with peace and passion, because that's the way they paint me."

As humans, the sky is like birth and death –something that unites us all. It is where we live (albeit at ground level), it is our first, our every, our last breath. It is the most common placement of the existence of 'heaven' or whatever afterlife we may believe in. It is the most important part of our world, the most changing, the instigator of most physical changes. And the weather is always in the news coverage! Clouds are much maligned bringers of unpleasant weather but rain is a necessary part of the ecosystem and the clouds that bring them can be a beautiful composition of art.

My mixed media work cannot be created directly on a signal box, unlike my acrylic paintings, and I am actively looking for additional opportunities to present the work to different communities through vinyl wrap. Although transferring the image to a flat surface removes the texture in the original work, it also adds an effect of 'how was this made' that will intrigue first-time viewers. The skyscapes I have presented were picked for their light colors and suitable shape for a box. Perhaps also pedestrians will start to explore the poem written into the paintings.

Description The themes within the piece speak to ideas of individuals and communities connecting through time and place. Throughout Redondo Beach's entire history a diverse group of individuals has gathered, mingled, and collided in unexpected, complex, colorful, creative, and ultimately satisfying ways. As a lifelong surfer from the East Coast one of the best things about visiting family & friends in the Los Angeles County and Redondo Beach area is the vibrancy and intensity of the light on the California coast, it is unlike anywhere I've ever seen in the world. The piece is a sort of homage to the vibrancy and resonance of this unique light in relation to the vast depth of creativity and inspiration to come directly from the Redondo Beach area.

Michael Carini is the Acrylic Alchemist

Don't be afraid to be different...Be afraid to be the same

Michael Carini received his artistic training in Los Angeles, studying at Loyola Marymount University while simultaneously serving as an apprentice under respected artists Jane Brucker and Roland Reiss. Graduating at the top of his class in 2006 with honors including the Scholar of Distinction Award in Painting, Carini returned to his hometown in San Diego, where he currently maintains his studio.

Michael Carini's creative visions will play with your senses and illuminate the human condition as he delves into the uncensored depths of his mind and invites you to catch a glimpse of the other side. Transmuting his medium through what he describes as a poetically alchemical process based upon the principles of equivalent exchange (Acrylic Alchemy), it is Carini's hope that you will completely lose yourself within these labyrinthine experiences, only to discover a new sense of self and emerge reborn.

Welcome to the world of "The Boy In The Box"-

City Of Redondo Beach Utility Box Proposal

My proposal for the City of Redondo Beach Utility Box Project is quite simply to beautify and inspire the community with positive affirmations from my art journal, colorful and energetic artwork like you've never seen from my series "The Boy In The Box" (hopefully soon on the box), or quite possibly a combination of the two. What I bring to the table is reliability, openness (both personally and for this project), marketability (happy to assist with any desired media coverage), and a wealth of experience. Let's work together as partners to maximize the impact of this project and my work on your community.

Artist Statement

This utility box would be a great way for the community of Redondo Beach to notice and appreciate art impacting the surrounding area. I believe public art helps create an evolving culture and reflects the city where the art is participating in. What attracts me to the utility box is that these artworks are accessible to everyone and energizes public spaces in a refreshing way.

Previous experiences I have in public art was recently working on a project for Los Angeles. The colorful detailed design I created with paint was installed in the city street reflecting cultural and social models of society.

The art piece I designed for this utility box will transform and enliven the area with its bold colorful accessible design. These shapes and forms are representations of the ocean and flora life inhabited in Redondo Beach. Images of seaweed, sea urchins, primroses, bougainvillea and an array of other plants and sea life are translated into bold colors reflecting the shape of each organic matter. The intention of these designs is to give a sense of place and identity for the area of Redondo Beach, for residents and visitors that come to area.

Artist Statement

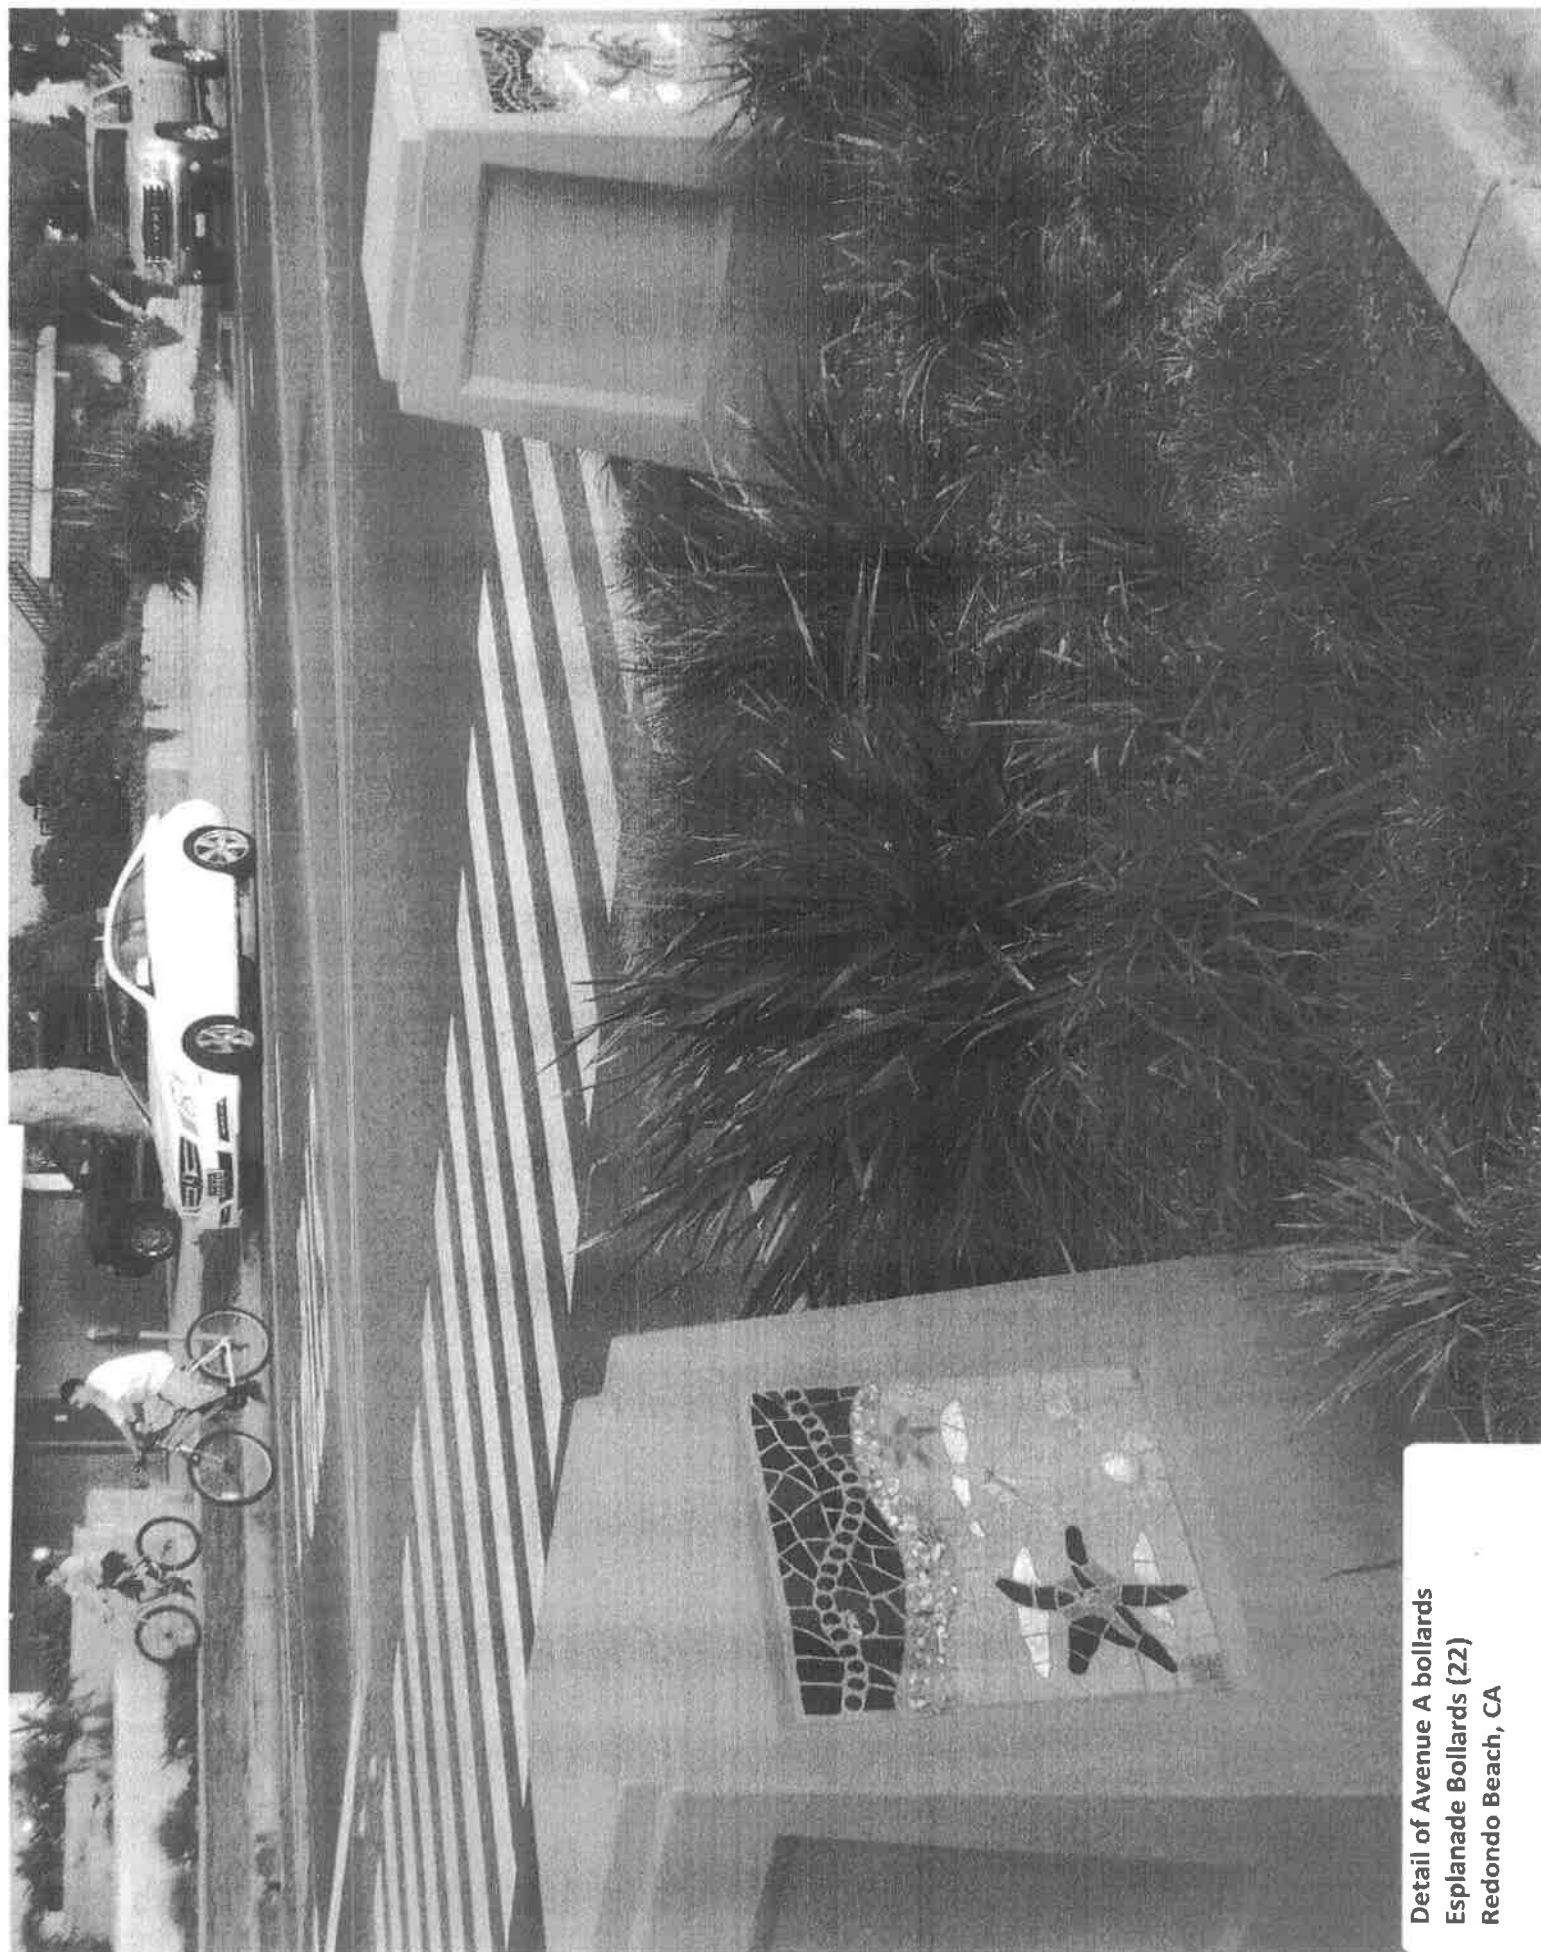

Our interest in public art began when we started working together in 2007 to build a mosaic for Tulita Elementary School in Redondo Beach. We found we had similar interests and an eye for design, a love for creating beauty and a partnership was formed!

Public art has been an exciting discovery of how a community becomes connected and proud. The process of creating the Ocean Steps definitely reinforced that and proved to be a wonderful experience. It's now our mission to mosaic everything!

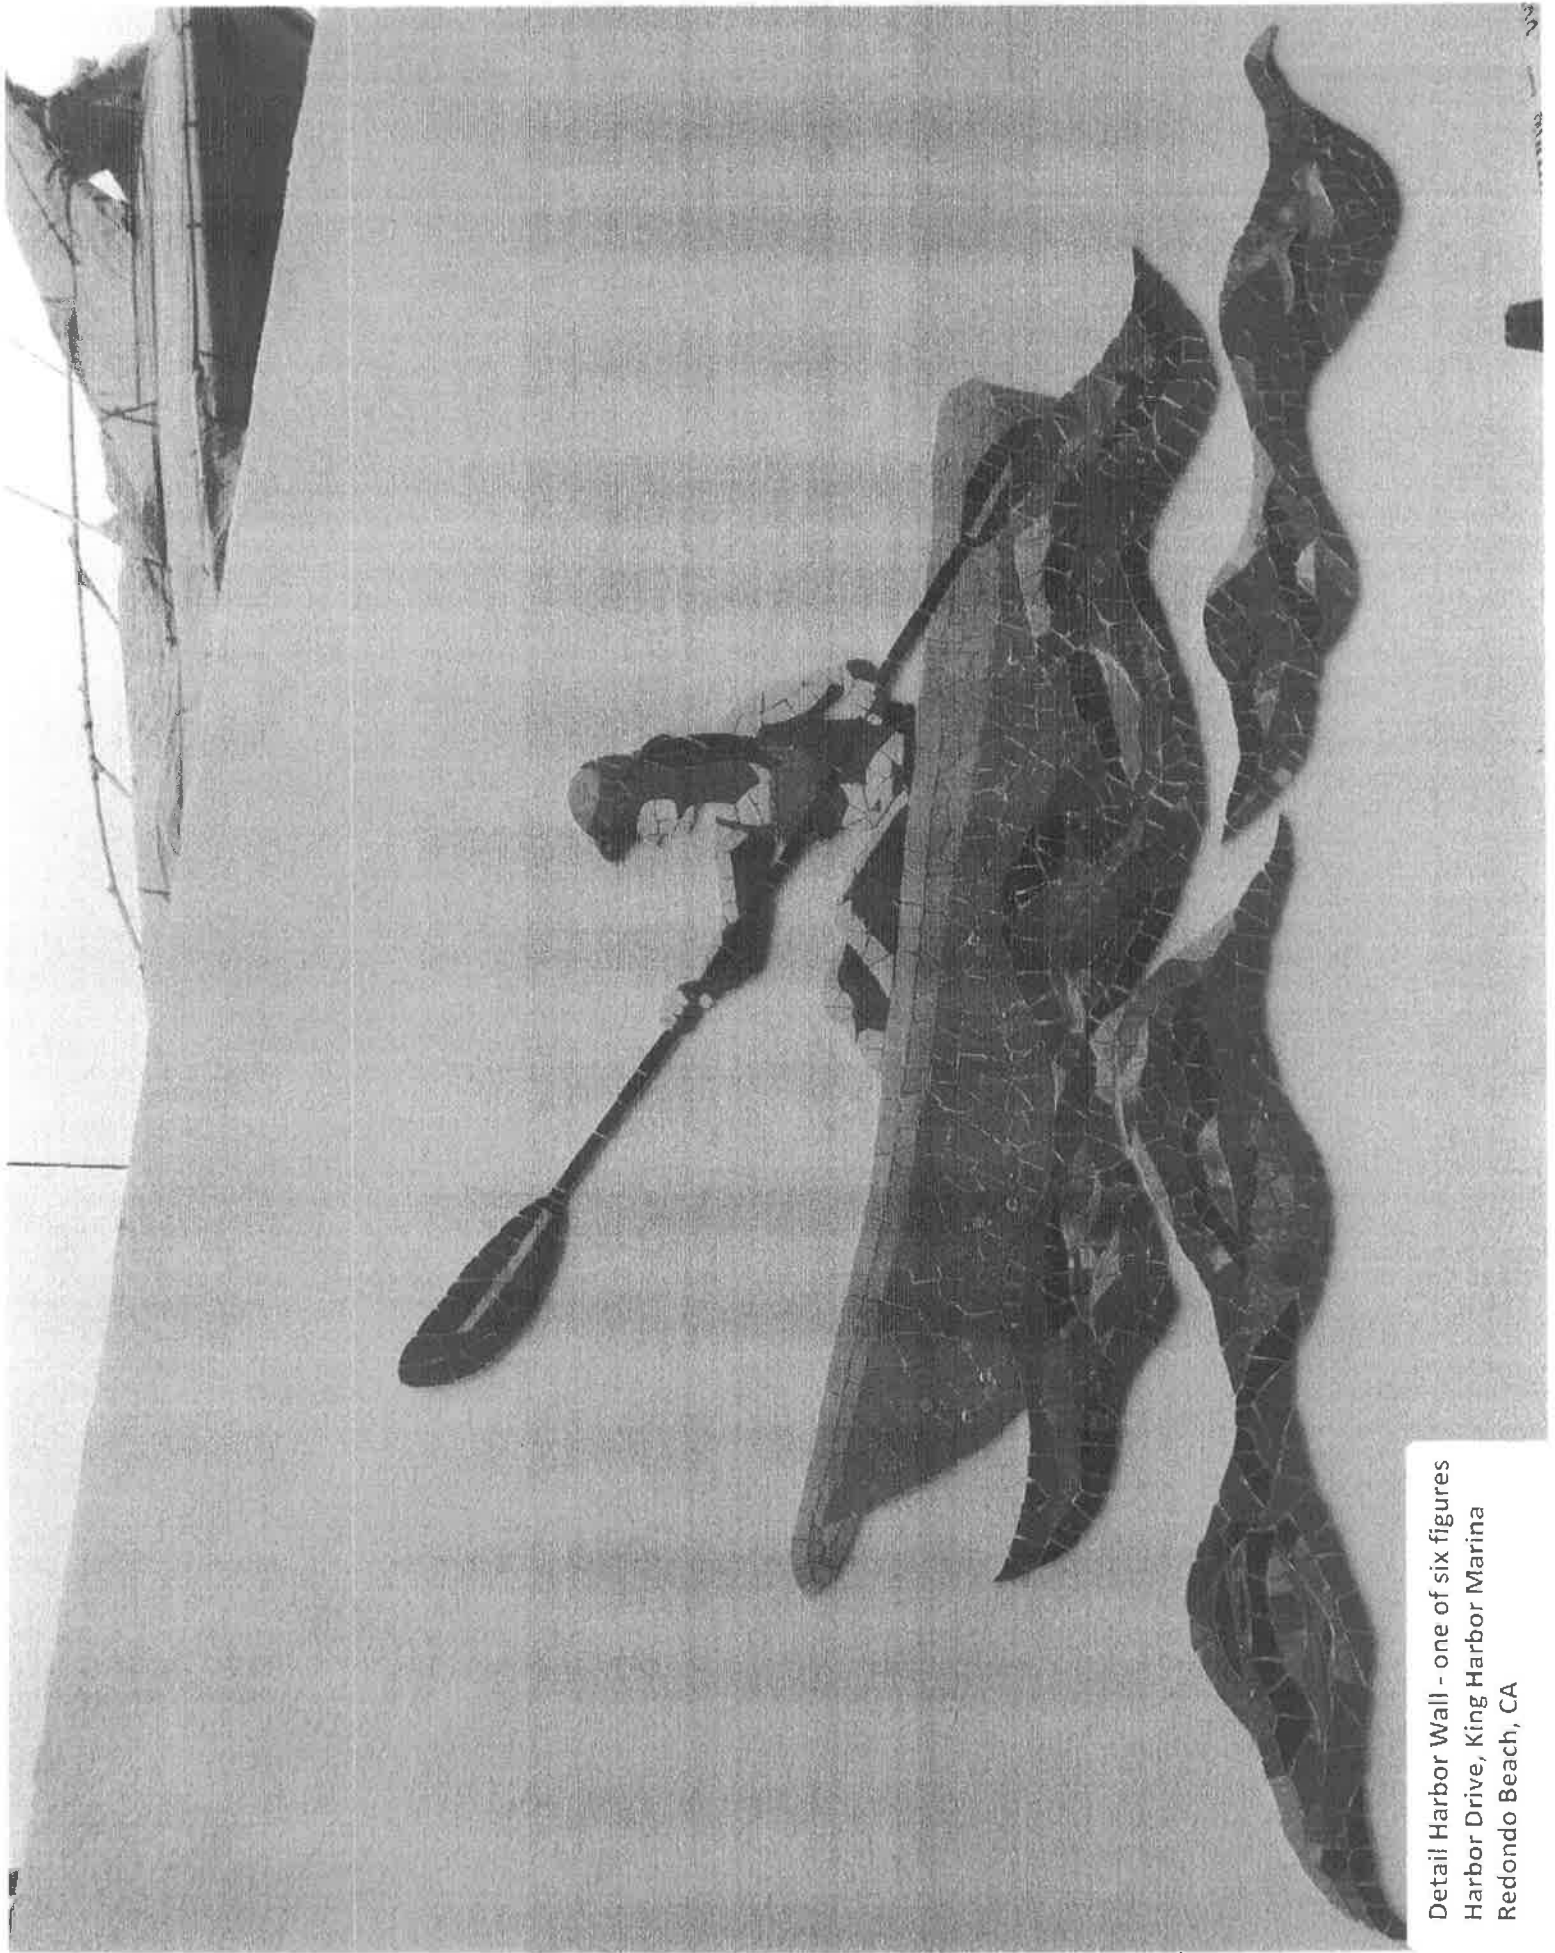

The Redondo Beach utility boxes would be a wonderful way to represent our mosaics in a different way and be able to share them with the community in different areas. We would be proud to continue to be a part of the public art movement in Redondo Beach.

Why I'm interested in having my art on a utility box in Redondo Beach. Well, I've always thought of Redondo as an artsy kind of area that also has a populace of environmentally conscious people. I feel my artwork fits right in to that oeuvre. I used to work near Redondo Beach many years ago and always loved the area; just couldn't afford to live there. Also, I feel my art would be a great fit for the utility box project.

Other public art projects that I've been a part of are a mural project on Hollywood Blvd. called the "Hollywood Night Gallery", in which portraits of Hollywood Movie Stars were painted on the metal roll down doors covering the stores on the Boulevard at night. I painted 8 of the portraits. Also, I painted a mural on the Performing Arts Center at Pacoima High School. Lastly, I was part of a community program (Community Service Day Foundation) to help spruce up schools with murals, plants and painting in areas of L.A. that are designated lower income. Lastly, I provided guidance and worked with youth at the N. Hollywood High School for an Arts Service Day, which was a City Council program.

As I stated in my first paragraph, I feel my art is a good fit for the beach community. It is colorful and fun; even my beach landscape painting. I feel it will contribute towards brightening up the area, contribute a bit of humor and add a positive statement to the local community.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sam Dixon - Biography, by Brianna L. Bond

Influenced by the paintings of Whistler, Sam Dixon's work captures the essence of inspiration and temperament. His art often focuses on shapes and abstraction through a gestural approach.

For Sam Dixon, three letters can make a world of difference. "I'm samdixon.org," says the self-proclaimed American impressionist from Wichita Falls, Texas. "He's samdixon.com," referring to the adult film star with who he is sometimes confused.

This Sam Dixon is happiest with a good glass of wine and a clean canvas. Winner of countless awards most the 2004 Gold Ink Award in Poster Design from the Publishing and Production Executive magazine-Dixon says he has always been "destined to be an artist."

Dixon never made a conscious decision to be an artist; art seemed to him. Drowning at three years old and pointing on the walls during kindergarten, loving every art project.

After graduating from Suitland Senior High School, Dixon moved on to Prince George's County College, where he honed his skills as an artist. He worked with Maryland artists Joe Mayer and Michael Carr, taking every art class he could. Though his art education was rich, he wishes that the university had offered a class on the business of art.

Main Street Gallery in Annapolis, Broadway Gallery in Fairfax, Canton Gallery in Baltimore Gallery, and Weatherburn Gallery in Naples, Florida, carry Dixon's work year round.

Though he's a self-proclaimed impressionist, lately he's stepped outside the box for several projects. "Art Uncorked," Wolf Trap's fourth annual art auction and wine celebration, will feature seven of Dixon's contemporary watercolor series of wine bottle. The series is Dixon's attempt to document the wine moment."

"I try to stay away from all the political stuff. Some of my colleagues may call me a sell-out, but I'm not interested in making a political statement. I just want my art to make you feel good about every day life."

"The creative spirit, may it always be represented by the beauty of the mark,"
Dixon said.

Dear Members of the Public Art Commission,

Thank you for considering my proposed design.

I'm a writer, cartoonist, graphic designer and scientific illustrator. As a lifetime resident of Redondo Beach, I've always felt a deep attachment to the coastal waters as a place of play and restoration. From late summer afternoons sunbathing to early morning surf sessions, the beaches of and around Redondo are some of the places I know best. Even with a lifetime in the waves, there's things I've only caught glimpses of: the slippery rub against my calf, the flash of sliver on a clear day or the outline of something bigger just under the sand. The beach is alive with animals, but even someone who spends so much time in the water rarely gets to see them.

With this design, it's my hope to that everyone can better see the world just below the surface. Every fish in my design is native to Southern California, and while I took some liberties with aesthetics, the image reflects the diversity of fishes off our shores. Tying everything together is our state marine fish, the electric orange Garibaldi. Easily seen in King Harbor, the garibaldi is our entry point into this hidden, colorful world.

Each panel is divided by a color theme, so no matter what direction pedestrians approach, they'll be treated by a different collection of fish. The larger species cross between panels, emphasizing their size and the connection between all these animals. The piece as a whole emphasizes our own connection the world beneath the surface. The simple, childlike design of the fishes is meant to evoke children's books, hopefully drawing in youngsters and inspiring childlike wonder in adults at the incredible animals just off the beach. While this is my first design explicitly for public art, I believe it captures a part of what draws us all to the coast and will resinate with residents and visitors alike.

Thank you again for your consideration.

All the best,

Tyler Hayden

UTILITY BOX ART - PORTFOLIO SUBMISSION

I am a designer and artist with experience creating art for a variety of utility boxes and murals. Florescent Meter @ Outlet Box (below) were created for The KONO Neighborhood Association in Oakland using stencils and spray paint. A few years ago I designed three vinyl wrapped utility boxes for San Leandro including Buttons @ Zippers (lower left). Since then I have also designed wraps for the city of Los Gatos and San Francisco's Tenderloin neighborhood.

The designs I am submitting for the Redondo Beach boxes use my signature PopDot style with the addition of symbols that resonate with the history and location of the city.

The PopDot series explores themes of culture, environment, and influences of our designed world. I work with bold familiar icons in saturated colors to draw viewer's attention. The designs are placed on a background of exaggerated dots bridging art and design processes of the past with technology of now. Using computer aided design; lines that are challenging to create with a paintbrush are produced effortlessly by the microdots of an inkjet printer, steadiness of a laser cutter, or sharpness of a 3D printer. Recontextualizing objects in this way allows for the addition of subtle messages that I hope inspire thought, though I am just as pleased if the work simply invites a smile. I believe strongly in accessibility of art for all in both placement of the work and content.

I look forward to the possibility of creating some of these designs in the PopDot style for the city of Redondo Beach.

I am fascinated with the idea to have the ability to have my art beyond your basic forms. It has always been my desire to see my art displayed on different objects and reach a wide diverse audience. Having my art displayed on a utility box will bring a different perspective of how art can be viewed and inspire a wide audience. My work has previously been displayed at Saks Fifth Avenue in July 2007 for the public art component Garden Dress Form where I was awarded second place. My work will transform any street that it is displayed on by bringing an eye-catching bold pallet will draw the audience to it. Along with the sense of movement and meditative sense it brings.

City of Redondo Beach Public Art Program

3. These are sketches in colored pencil for the ideas for the box. The finished work would be oil paintings, (or mixed media paintings with spray paint, oil paint and mixed media), scanned into jpgs.

4. I don't have experience working on public art projects, but have most of my experience showing my paintings in galleries. I am interested in working on utility boxes, because I love seeing the art on utility boxes around the city. My art all has to do with ocean scenes, since the area of the boxes is by the ocean. Two of the boxes have mythological creatures like Neptune and mermaids, the other box has sea creatures. I like bright colors, and cartoonlike drawing to create fantasylike environments.

RAFAEL MCMASTER ABOUT THE ARTIST

Great art doesn’t have to be clever to be wonderful.”

South Bay artist Rafael McMaster works within, beyond, and between the mediums of acrylic, oil, watercolor, graphite, illustration, and photography. The interplay between the disciplines acts as an inspiration to his work, which incorporates involved, complex and experimental processes. The local artist has a fashion design degree from the Art Institute of Seattle and has designed clothing lines for Puma and many others. Alongside clothing, Rafael has designed multiple lines of snowboards, Webby award nominated websites, and brand and design work from Chris Paul to Matthew McConaughey to MEK denim.

Rafael teaches a local South Bay arts program focused around painting and photography. The core principle of the program is to teach “creative confidence” to youth.

Rafael is also accepting commission for an on-going family painting series. The artist paints with the families for multiple sessions in an involved lesson/collaboration - some processes lasting up to 15 months. The custom painting is then refined into a “contemporary family seal,” intertwining symbolism, personal subtleties and messages.

Rafael currently has a brand consulting and interactive design practice in South Bay. He is the co-founder of HBAC (Hermosa Beach Artists Collective), and he and his wife Tera raise five kids and a hyper puppy.

Q Who are you and what do you do?

A Rafael McMaster, artist. I am also a father, husband and creator. If Unifier of Energy was a job title, then that's what I'd want to be.

Q Who is/are your favorite artist/s?

A Currently, my favorite visual artist is Blaine Fontana

Q What do you aspire to do with your work?

A First and foremost, I want to make the audience feel something. Preferably with the heart above the mind. Secondly, I want to invite my fellow artist friends to wonder "how did he do that? wait, what's going on here?" I want to further the shared curiosity around process among my friends and for all of us to push each other. Lastly, I want to inspire our art community (and students) the same way they inspire me - if I can create something that ignites someone in a way where they are drawn beyond their own control to want to create, then for me, the communion is whole.

Q Describe your perfect creative day.

A I think I'm living it...I have everything from painting supplies to music recording equipment at my fingertips. So I have the daily opportunity to live in a state of perfect creativity - whether it expresses itself as graphic design or teaching kids or painting at the beach. Right now, my creativity is expressing itself through creating a sustainable ecosystem of friends and artists in South Bay. Then the seasons will change and I will be drawn towards photography or songwriting - it's really fluid in nature, and I'm really grateful for these perfect days."

Q What does art mean to you?

A It depends on the art. In the most broad sense, I believe art is a byproduct of humans trying to process their emotions - it happens through a cultural lens, a personally expressive lens, and through a skilled medium - all at once. When all those filters and parameters collide and something happens. Art reflects our need to make sense of the things we can't put into words, and in a way makes us feel like we're not alone in having that space within us that defies words or any easy way to communicate with each other about. But right now I feel art is also about so many other things - and so many things lately that are wrapped around the ego or being clever. I try to stay on the more primordial end of things, where art plays a more abstract and emotional role. I'd rather my relationship with art be about feeling things with the heart and connecting with others - I have enough things to think about, I'm not sure I want to think about the "expression of feelings" or to feel any more separate from others. If there's a way for us all to feel more connected through things that inspire us, then that to me is a fulfilling experience.

Q Tell me about your Art Academy. What was the motivation behind it? How many kids are involved? Where do you see it going?

A The Akadamie is something I'm very proud of - to me it's really important and meaningful, and at the core of what I'm about and what my vision is. Right now I have 15 students under the age of 15 - the youngest is six. I am committed to teaching them everything I know about photography, painting, graphic design, songwriting - everything and anything creative. I'm curious: what happens when skilled creativity and art is second nature to a kid - like a language, or throwing a ball, or riding a skateboard? What happens when they have such immersion into the creative disciplines that they wear it like a second skin? When they think in colors and daydream about new processes? The majority of these kids are younger than eight, which places them in a certain developmental stage where reality is still an evolving idea. For these students - some of which I've been working with for over a year - using art resin and macro lenses is normal and the resulting work is off the charts. Most people see their work and think it's mine or a fellow artist's. And its kids' work - it just doesn't look immature because they are using real equipment and aren't being guided towards childish projects and dumbed-down process. Right now I am sitting on an amazing body of their work (over 32,000 photographs and 100+ paintings), and I am looking for partners, sponsors, and volunteers to help me turn this into a traveling exhibit. I think it'd open people's eyes to what these kids can create when given the tools, and my vision is to bring these tools and resources to kids who don't have access to them.

Q How and why did you get involved with the Young at Art Foundation?

A My daughter Tasha is at an elementary school that doesn't have the funding for a regular art program - not to the schools fault either, it's just how the funding shakes down right now. If not for Young At Art - which is a volunteer-based non-profit art program that has been running in the South Bay for 35 years - then her and her classmates would be missing art in school as a whole. If you are the flag bearer of the only art in my child's school, then you have my loyalty. And Young At Art is a brilliant program with brilliant leadership - I'm proud to be a Young At Art volunteer. If anyone wants to get involved or help sponsor or donate to the program, please reach out to me.

Q What was the last album/song you listened to? What is on constant rotation?

A Currently, Sir Sly, Portugal the Man, and Glass Animals are keeping my playlists fresh. But the classics like The Beatles, Zeppelin, Manu Chao, Air, Pinback, 2Pac, and Postal Service are all on solid rotation.

Q What are you currently working on?

A I have a 36 foot collaborative piece with Danny Gardner in the works. Next step on it involves laser etching and an xy plotter. The process is requiring lots of problem solving and exploring - which leads to growing and new perspectives. I'm also working on a 9ft x 12 ft triptych of mixed media on metal - right now I'm at the stage where I'm using an electric sander to work back down to the metal from layers of paint that have built up over the year. And there's another series of canvas based works involving epoxy resin and negative space. So, fun explorative works that will probably all be done by our big end of summer show in August at Hermosa Design.

Q What can we expect from you?

A For this year's artwork to grow beyond last year's, and to be of service.

"Connect" | 48 x 24 | NFS

When local artist Rafael McMaster began sharing his artwork publicly last year for the first time, it came with a surprise. "I decided I was going to reach out to the local Hermosa galleries to see where I could show art," explains Rafael, "only to realize there aren't any galleries in Hermosa."

His mission to share his artwork and photography soon embraced a larger and more community-driven vision, as Rafael committed himself to helping fellow local artists who are met with the same local challenges: in Hermosa there are few places to show, and no affordable artist workspaces.

Soon thereafter, Rafael founded the Hermosa Beach Artists Collective, a 501(c)(3) that he now runs with Amy Friedberg and Grae Halone.

"The non-profit has three goals: open a co-op gallery in 2017, find shared workspace for local artists, and teach local kids anything and everything they want to know about art," says McMaster. "We're also working on a program to export artists-volunteers to teach after-school classes in other communities where expensive equipment like cameras or art supplies are scarce."

The latter initiative is very close to heart for Rafael, who offers photography and art classes for youth and adults.

"What's most important to me is that I create a safe place where my students feel free and fearless, and they can be expressive and not loose, and through it all gained CREATIVE CONFIDENCE." He adds, "The camera and the paintbrush are just two ways of getting there. I teach the program is to teach people to tap into the essence of who they are, and to create from that space."

Some of Rafael's students' work—both fine art and photography—will be on display at the upcoming Water&Wood exhibit, showing from February 11-18th at Hermosa Design. The event will be the first annual "Water&Wood" show—a local celebration of artists, photographers, and their love for water and wood. "It'll be a really awesome and diverse exhibit—it's anything, a really cool scene for families, or youth, or a night out." The event will be open 4-9 PM on Saturdays (Feb 11th and 18th), and from 9-5 PM during the week.

his passion for creativity, process, and community. "Art is so vital. It inspires us and reminds us of our humanity—that we can conceive of beauty, spirituality, hope, love—that is unique to the human experience," McMaster says. "I'd love for South Bay to be known for its art scene—and that when people come to L.A., coming to South Bay to experience the art is part of the 'must-see' checklist. There are so many talented and phenomenal photographers and artists who have been doing their craft for years here in South Bay. I'd love it if there was a gallery where my kids could go to be able to appreciate their work."

01/15/18

Dear Public Art Commission,

My name is Juan Melendez, but artistically, I sometimes go by an alias-Jesse Dez. The name honors my Mother who passed away years ago. I'm interested in designing a utility box because I am a Redondo Beach resident, a Hands On Art Docent, and I love our city. I have a traditional background in art, graphics, photography, and video. This utility box project affords me a unique opportunity to show my students how their artwork has a place where we all live. It took me a while to submit as I was under the impression, my works had to be finished; so I finished them. I chose to work in my familiar mediums of pencil, ink, and color pencils because of the accessibility. The tools, artwork, and design help convey an urgency, a roughness, and familiarity anyone, young or old, will be able to see up close. I'm sincerely hoping our kids will notice the works, go home, and draw. The color palettes should get them to look...

I don't have much history in working in public art projects. This is a new outlet for me. There was Sidewalk Chalk Event at Redondo Beach Pier where I drew in chalk. That's probably my first time letting something go in public. I included it as one of my examples ;) I've been published in some Home Magazine books before as I used to work at a tile place in Florida, many years ago. I've also had many of my photographs used in a variety of different outlets. This is really my first foray into putting (traditional) work out there. This project would in effect, "put me on the map." The Public Art Commission would be breaking me out as an (traditional) Artist! Not that I wasn't before, but not like this. That's kind of fantastic, don't you think? It would definitely be a great story to tell my Hands On Art kids, when we have our next couple of art classes. They were the ones who have inspired me over the last couple of years. I've been a docent for three years now and I love it. My classes are very kinetic and the kids respond well.

This project really pushed me to pick up my pencils, pens, inks, and color pencils. It was the most traditional art I've pumped out in a while. I want to do more. A lot more. I've done a lot of graphics over the years and computer design work is great. Eventually it all ends up in the computer as the middle ground, but there is something visceral about making organic art with your hands; art you can feel. I hope I conveyed that. My intention was for people to look up close at it, to see the strokes, and imperfections in the lines. I didn't want it to be clean and sterile. I wanted the work to feel real and with a sense of urgency. I wanted color designs that would bring attention to the box. I don't want the utility box to look like some ad agency designed the artwork. I wanted it to look like somebody made it with their hands. I'm hoping that people will stop and walk around the boxes to look at the images. I love it.

P.S. I've entered 3 separate entries (2 traditional "Find Your Way." & "This is Love.", and 1 photography set "My Redondo Beach"). I could take the 5 unique designs from "This is Love." and spread them out? I could create 4 more panels for each and give you 5 boxes instead of one. Pick me!!! 7 boxes!

Sincerely,

Utility box art helps activate public spaces and shows how much a city cares for its community by investing in public art. When I drive by areas with public art, it piques my interest as it gives the impression of being a vibrant, welcoming community. I take time to revisit these communities and see everything they have to offer from events to restaurants to shopping. Public art is something that promotes the community while also beautifying the area.

I'm interested in creating a utility box art piece for the City of Redondo Beach to help achieve this goal. I want to contribute to the public art programs that seem to be growing throughout Southern California. At the end of last year, I created a utility box art piece for the City of Buena Park as part of their pilot program. I worked closely with the wrap team to make adjustments to the design especially after a battery was added after the design was completed which required a redesign quickly to meet the City Manager's office and Community Service Department's ideal timeline. While my experience with public art is limited, I am eager to expand my artistic resume and hope to have my design considered for part of the program.

My design is to celebrate Redondo Beach's Festival of the Kite. I wanted to tie in your special event and beach themes into encourage people to see everything Redondo has to offer.

STATEMENT OF THE ARTIST

When I create art, I strive to convey the passion I feel for life by joyfully depicting people enjoying their lives. It is the people, in their familiar surroundings, that inspire me to communicate their experience into a work of art which will, in turn, inspire others. Whether depicting the warmth of families picnicking on a summer day, the happiness of children splashing in water or the loving connection between a boy and his dog, I seek to bring the essence of the experience to the surface as a representation of the meaning of life: to enjoy each moment, as it is the simple moments that make a great life.

I strive to bring my art to the public, and am currently involved in a banner project with San Francisco Women Artists and its Neighborhood Arts Collaborative Banner Project. In working on this project, I produced all work long prior to the deadlines and pursuant to the specifications. I believe that art should be viewed by all members of society regardless of their ability to pay, so public art perfectly suits my desire to give access to art to everyone. My goal is to bring my art to the people by pursuing public art opportunities.

While oil painting using a palette knife is my primary medium, I also enjoy creating works of art in infrared photography, plastic resin and watercolors. My art is easily converted to work in public spaces through transfer to other surfaces.

My skills and experience demonstrate that I have lived my life in the pursuit of empowering others in all forms of art. During law school, I was one of the founding members of Hastings Women's Journal, which continues to publish law journal articles furthering the rights of women. I was the creator of Hastings' Lawyers for the Arts, which brought an interactive art experience to school children at the TenderLion day care program. In the past year, I made two educational films regarding fair housing rights. I have been involved with the civil rights community for many years and am a respected leader in the area of housing civil rights. I studied art at Las Positas collage in Livermore, CA and Academy of Art in San Francisco, CA.

Artist Statement:

I'm a 7th Grade "Adams Middle school" student. I have always had a passion towards 'Art'. I have been indulging in various art forms and mediums. I like to explore art in my form and make vibrant colorful things. I take regular art classes to satisfy my curiosity and refine my talent. When my mother told me about the utility boxes artwork, I was very excited and really wanted to make my own unique footprint to serve the community which I regard very highly.

I would want to design a utility box and enliven the area because of three main reasons.

Firstly, I am interested in giving back to the community in any way I can. This is because Redondo Beach has raised me very well. Also, I am a scout and this is one way I want to give back to the community.

Secondly, I want to make public art and make the world more colorful and pretty. I love making art and so I want to share that joy with everyone and this is the one good way (making art for the public) as everyone gets to see it.

Finally, I think it will enliven the place as it is very positive art with vibrant colors. Doing so, I hope it will make people happier and more cheerful because everyone likes good, positive art.

Alyce's Art Studio

To whom it may concern,

In 2012, Rishi Pandey was one of my first students at Alyce's Art Studio, a children's art school in Manhattan Beach, CA. At Alyce's Art Studio we work to preserve the natural creative spirit of our students while at the same time introducing them to the world of fine art. I was immediately impressed by how quickly Rishi grasped the various art concepts in the curriculum especially since he was only 6 years old when he began taking classes. I would introduce color blending with oil pastels and I would come back to Rishi and he would have already begun to develop smooth gradations with a variety of colors. I would show Rishi basic compositional development and he, again, would continue to develop these concepts and expand upon them. Rishi would of course do this in a calm and nonchalant way. Rishi moved quickly through the curriculum onto more advanced concepts like 1-point perspective and realism and eventually started to develop a unique personal style.

Rishi creates vibrant illustrations and paintings. He has a great sense of humor that clearly comes across in his artwork. And as his skills have grown so has his work. Rishi's artwork is mature beyond his age due to the patience and deliberateness found in his art pieces.

Aside from art, Rishi is a kind and generous student who consistently takes time to compliment his fellow students on their accomplishments. He is extremely hardworking and will spend the time to add each and every detail with mindfulness. Rishi stands out among the 300 students attending art classes each week. He is unique in his work ethic, artistic expression, and overall demeanor. I am proud having Rishi at my studio, he is an example of being a good person and creating artwork that is true to his talents and personal interests.

Sincerely,

For this Utility Box design, we wanted to highlight a moment in time in Redondo Beach's History. In a nod to Redondo Beach's historical heritage, this design shows what was happening underwater in Redondo Beach on August 25, 1910, during a run of Mackerel. See the following Newspaper article.

REDONDO HAVING FINE RUN OF MACKEREL

REDONDO, Aug. 25.—Excitement over the heavy run of mackerel has now reached the point where scores of fishermen line the wharves as early as 3 o'clock in the morning to make certain of a place from which to fish at daylight when the mackerel come in to feed. At daylight yesterday morning there were no fewer than 300 fishermen on the various wharves waiting for the run. Many fine hauls were made, and it is estimated that summer visitors here have salted down nearly a ton of the toothsome "corn-feds."

On wharf No. 3, seventeen yellow-tails were landed yesterday, the largest one weighing $33\frac{1}{2}$ pounds.

@REDONDOBEACHARTIST

I would like my art to appear on a utility box(es) in Redondo Beach because a) I love Redondo Beach and it's the best place on earth; b) I think my artwork would help transform these ugly utilitarian, necessary clunkers into something pretty and fun; and c) I'd like to leave just a little mark on our world - figuratively and literally - and I think, in addition to the library murals I already created, this is another great way to do just that!

If you visit either of the Redondo Beach libraries, you will see evidence of my artwork and what I am capable of, but please note - NONE of the artwork was traced, created using a computer, or even a grid. Everything you see was free-hand drawn and designed and painted. While I did have a tremendous team behind me which I absolutely could not have done without (LRB 2014. B.C.E.!) to help create said murals, I had a hand in painting, all or part of, every bit of the murals but Verdi (the yellow snake).

If you visit the RUHS baseball left field wall, you will find my SeaHawk logo and script that I painted, but please again note - NONE of the art that I painted was traced, created using a grid or any other "electronic" means than by my own freehand (first in chalk), then in paint - adjusting as I went.

I have painted quite a few other private residential murals in homes and private institutions; from boys' and girls' bedrooms being transformed into imagination wonderlands to bathroom accents adding warmth and interest.

I think, in this particular case, my artwork that I'm proposing "RB Pier: Dusk," gives just a little hint of the beauty that awaits any visitor as he/she approaches the Pacific Ocean in Redondo.

I propose making a vinyl wrap out of my RB Pier: Dusk painting, which I have a high-res image of, so that it will be an exact replication of the original painting but will withstand the elements.

Specifications

The Triangle & The Plunge is an Adobe Illustrator file, capable of being adapted to dimensions, colorspace, and resolution required for printing on vinyl and covered with anti-graffiti laminated. It is prepared using a book scanner, inkjet printer, folded paper, before final edits are rendered in Illustrator.

Artist Statement

The Triangle & The Plunge is a collaboration between artists Noémie Despland-Lichtert and Brendan Shea, designers and educators who share an interest in site-specific urban history and phenomena. Their work spans across the fields of art, design and pedagogy and explores how spaces can be activated to function as a means of preserving and archiving information, objects and cities. Their current work confronts the conditions of the post-industrial landscape of Los Angeles through Roundhouse, a curatorial platform for public engagement with urban history. In the spring of 2017 they exhibited and published their year-long research and artistic practice on Taylor Yard Park.

The Triangle & The Plunge extends their collaboration into the streets by creating public art and enhancing urban experiences. Connecting art and history, the project aims to create a contemporary, vivid artwork inspired by the rich history and contemporary dynamism of Redondo Beach. Drawing on historical documents and vanished urban forms, it proposes to create a new site-specific work of art rethinking two of the city's infamous, albeit lost, landmarks: The Triangle and The Plunge.

Composed of superpositions of geometry, each panel of the mural features intricate figures set against a multi-colored ground. To create the work, Roundhouse, who are trained in both researching and making, designed a process of printing, folding, and photographing that produces intricate and complex figures from two simple geometries—the triangle and the rectangle. For each panel, a digital composition is printed out, manually creased on a sheet of paper and photographed, repeating this process multiple times. The recursive procedure results in new compositions that alter the ideal triangular and rectangular geometry of the starting point, yet retain a visible, residue of two historical forms drawn with reference to the Triangle and The Plunge.

The Triangle and The Plunge have in common that they each participated in bringing modernity to Southern California and Redondo Beach. The triangular elements abstract the former footprint of the Triangle, a Modernist retail-district and shopping center, while the rectangular elements draw inspiration from the former footprint of the The Plunge, a turn-of-the-century saltwater pool. The Triangle and The Plunge explores the history, current state, and potential futures of Redondo Beach, locating its significance within a larger network of commerce, leisure, and cultural exchanges.

Noémie Despland-Lichtert is an urban historian and holds a BFA from Concordia University, a Post-professional Master of Architecture from McGill, and a Master in Curatorial Studies from the University of Southern California. Brendan Shea is a designer whose works spans architecture, technology, and collaborative practice and holds a B.A. in Architectural Studies from the University of California Los Angeles and an M.Arch from Princeton University. Their collaboration, Roundhouse, is an art platform excavating, archiving, and rethinking Southern California history and aesthetics, cultural materials and communities.

Roundhouse is a curatorial platform for public engagement, investigating urban change and site specific histories. Formed in 2015, it facilitates public engagement with sites through urban labs, semi-guided walking tours and in-situ spatial interventions. Roundhouse seeks to document and preserve current liminal states of neighborhood and site, starting with three workshops at Taylor Yard, a large abandoned post-industrial parcel in Glassell Park.

SUBMISSION FOR UTILITY BOX – PUBLIC ART PROGRAM

May, 1st, 2020

As a proud resident of California and a lifelong student of street art, I have admired and drawn inspiration from public utility box artwork my entire life. Having lived in Hollywood for the better part of a decade where installations like these seem to be on practically every corner, I've seen firsthand how they can enliven, enrich and stimulate an environment and community. These pieces can effectively transform the mundane and the industrial into a work of art that brings a smile, inspires reflection, or promotes social activism. All of these effects are possible with works such as these and, if selected, I would be overjoyed to create such a piece for the City of Redondo Beach.

I am a Resident Artist at the Hive Gallery in Downtown L.A. on historic Gallery Row where my work is a prominent part of the permanent exhibition. Having actively participated in this community for going on a year now, I've been thoroughly stimulated by myriad works which combine pop art, street art, surrealism, social activism and the exploration of assorted cultures and identities. The piece that I've conceptualized for my submission, while designed to be joyful and family-friendly, also explores some of these ideas. The piece illustrates a chance meeting between two animals from "different walks of life" - a decidedly "punk" pelican and a very colorful fish. Within the span of five quick moments frozen in time, these two find common ground, mutual respect, admiration and, ultimately, friendship.

I feel strongly that these goals should be at the heart of any thriving city (or overall society, for that matter). For all of these reasons, I would be more than honored to deliver a piece that promotes such a positive idea, that could also brighten the streets of such a wonderful and diverse city as Redondo Beach.

Biography:

Currently, The Public Arts Commissioner for the city of Redondo Beach, Communications Director for the Redondo Beach Art Group, member of Friends of Redondo Beach Arts and an active docent for Hands on Art. Projects selected to be taught to childrens' in the Southbay and surrounding areas, promoting Arts and Culture in the community.

She was recently honored in the "World Book of Records" 2019

Qualified in Finance, worked as a banker, business financial consultant, Ashish continues her devotion un-struck, non-stop. She sketches the deity daily from 1991 till date and has to her credit more than 10760+ sketches of the formless, energizing the forms of alphabets. More than thirty years of dedication to her passion, to her inner divinity with a message of love and integration Ashish visualizes Ganesha in Alphabets.

In her dreams Ganesha appeared before her eyes and blessed her. She saw alphabets of many languages taking the form of Ganesha - the formless in a form. Having received the divine blessings she began her journey to encompass the Lord in all the alphabet of all the languages of the world written and spoken to integrate the energies. She has the intension of integrating the world in her unique way. She prays to the lord through her sketches to bless our world with Love, Wisdom, peace prosperity, and success. In these trying times of stress and disintegration with the objective to integrate she offers her worship every day.

Every day is a new day, a new beginning and possesses a new set of schedule which means that each day brings its own problems and obstacles that we have to handle. Ganesha as 'Vighnaharta' makes the day go by with ease and comes in a new form to adore my page for that day. Sketching and thinking about Ganesha now is very much part of her daily routine. For Ashish, her sketches are her life breath.

Her journey has been difficult but has been blessed and much more eventful than she had ever imagined. She have been able to find the reason for my existence, the purpose of this beautiful life. She have also been able to inspire other people and help them find their purpose. For more than two decades her devotion to the divinity is evident in the sketches, in their strokes, in the forms that the alphabet took.

Artists and critics name her work as 'Alphabet Art'. Intellectuals term it as 'Genius work'. To politicians it is 'National Integration'. The press recognizes her work as a humble attempt towards 'World Peace'. For linguists, she is evolving a new language – 'The language of Ganesha'.

Whatever is said or written about her during the last 3 decades, the fact remains that 'DRAWN TO THE LORD' – paintings of Ashish are certainly drawing her to the Lord and also her admirers in a very humble way.

Painting for me is a raw and cathartic expression of my inner self. It is also an expression of the human condition. I see myself almost as a conduit for expressing raw and passionate emotions, without a filter. I think this is why people respond to my work, because they recognize these emotions from my art, in themselves. I have personally used art to heal and work through some rough periods in my life, and I like to say that my artwork is a process of transitioning from "darkness into light".

I think this is part of the reason why I am drawn to participating in this utility box project, because art has the ability to heal and even bring communities together. Also, it highlights the strength and creativity of the community, reminding them of what is possible. The works that I have chosen for this project embody a feeling of working together and represent how all colors (like people) come together to make up a strong painting (and community). Also, I have chosen to focus on the healing energy of the ocean, which is a big part of this beach community.

In my abstraction, the work flows from a vibrant cosmic fluidity to a sort of messy geometrical abstraction. I am obsessed with both the assemblage and decay of beautiful forms, color and texture in my tactile oil paintings and I strive to let the medium itself have a strong voice. My textures are thick, chewy and many people say seemingly "edible", daring the viewer to want to touch and feel each piece. I like the idea that everything is transitory and that forms and even my own paintings will change with time. I stay constantly inspired by surrounding myself with music, literature, movies, and by cultivating my own everyday experiences. I employ all of these elements to better access the present moment, where all true creativity flows from, and which allows ideas to adapt and evolve. This is what feeds my art and helps it to grow and change with every passing day.

Resume

I am a local Redondo Beach photographer and resin artist and have recently shown my work at Resin Gallery in Hermosa Beach. I have also had shows of my previous works at Quoting Artists Gallery in Beverlywood, and Sponto Gallery and 2 Girls and a Dog Gallery in Venice Beach.

My photos have been published in Where Magazine, Orange Coast Magazine, and Corona Del Mar Plaza Magazine. Last year I created a film for the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce of aerial drone shots of Hollywood. The film opened up the 2017 Hollywood Chambers Business Summit.

My deep love of the ocean is found in most of my work. In addition to my photography, I also create resin pieces that I model off of my aerial drone shots.

Artists Statement

I am interested in designing a utility box for Redondo Beach because this is my hometown and I would be thrilled to have my work be a part of this community. I really enjoy living in this cute beach town and would love to share my images of Redondo Beach with everyone. Recently, I donated my artwork to be auctioned off to support Hands on Art at Alta Vista Elementary School. I have not done any public works projects but would love to be a part of it.

My images of Redondo Beach are bright and vibrant and really capture the beauty of Redondo. My drone photos show a side of Redondo that many have not seen. Looking straight down onto our ocean brings out more vibrant colors than can be seen by land and gives the viewer a different perspective.

Letter of Recommendation

February 9, 2020

Dear Commissioners,

Thank you for considering Dagny's application. I am Dagny's Dad helping her with this project. She is in 1st grade and is entirely self-taught. She has a true passion for art. I can tell because she seems to be very easily distracted in everything else, but she can sit for hours at a time drawing and painting by herself. She is known at school to fellow students (and their parents) as an artist because she draws constantly and prolifically during breaks and will sometimes give the drawings to her classmates as gifts.

I brought the utility box art program to her attention earlier in the year and took her to see what a utility box looked like, and she got really excited about the prospect of being able to decorate them with her art.

For this project, she created the artwork with her typical art supplies - pens, pencils, color markers on paper - and I helped her scan the papers and convert her artwork to digital format per the program requirements.

I sincerely hope you will consider Dagny's artwork for one or more utility boxes. I think it will go a long way in building the confidence of a promising young artist.

Thank you,

Tim C. Tang

Paint on Metal

The community of Redondo Beach has always been inspiring to me. Even before I was a resident here, I admired the sense of community spirit and civic engagement that the city values so much in its citizens. However, with the threat of development and outsider influence on our community, I have seen what used to be positive engagement transform into a fiery struggle of opinions. The city is divided on the Waterfront project to such an extent that my neighbors spray paint each others' signs and have legitimate, personal fights over the future of their neighborhood. While it is nice to know that the citizens are invested and willing to fight for the future of this town, it hurts me to know that the community is so divided. I wanted to create a project that would celebrate what it means to live in Redondo Beach and tie it to a preservation of the current spirit and environment of our Waterfront and Pier area.

I am a student with very little experience in public art projects; however, I have designed and painted stage sets and a community mural before. I have the support of art teachers at my high school (Chadwick) and my ever-enthusiastic community behind me, so I am prepared for this project to not only be educational, but to be successful. I designed the box to be a paint-by-numbers type of experience, as I want the citizens of Redondo Beach to help me paint it. While I will do preparation, priming, detailed painting, touch-ups, and texture work myself, I want as many hands on the project as possible.

I truly believe that not only painting the box together but having the Pier live on through art regardless of the upcoming changes in the next few years will allow the citizens of Redondo Beach to pause, smile, and remember why they love the community that surrounds them. Redondo Beach is so, so special, and I want our box to remind people of that every time they walk by.

Richard Tucci Artist Statement

I am a multi-discipline visual artist. My process is I will take hundreds of photographs, and then winnow them down to the best ones. From there, I will modify them in photoshop to create silhouette style designs. From there, I blow up the silhouette images, and carve out stencils with an exacto-knife, which allows me to then use the large stencils to create mass-copying of the images, either on canvas, alternative backing, or on approved walls as street art. The message behind my work is that we are all artists, and art is something special. Art is two things at the same time; art is the great democratizing factor, in that anyone and everyone can create art regardless of whether or not it sells; and art is also the most precious natural resource we have, because art can inspire people in ways that other commodities can't.

I love painting utility boxes for a number of reasons: they provide an unexpected place for public art, surprising and delighting viewers, and they cover previously unsightly infrastructure. I have designed a number of utility boxes and trash cans and love the idea that the designs can be bold, colorful and unexpected.

I have worked on numerous public art projects for the past 25+ years in both the U.S. and abroad. The projects range in scale from large public murals to utility boxes and trash cans and honor, reflect and address the culture and neighborhood in which they appear, as do the designs I am submitting. The cans I painted 3 years ago in a high crime and homeless neighborhood in San Francisco have not been tagged 3 years later, showing that the neighborhood continues to take pride in and appreciate the effort. I can say the same of the murals I've painted in similar areas. All of these projects were accomplished on time and within budget.

The designs I'm submitting are : Concept #1, which honors and celebrates the diverse ethnic background of the residents of Redondo Beach by depicting traditional fabric designs from the continents where some originated: Africa, Indigenous, Central America, Asia and Northern Europe. The simple and bright designs respect the contributions of people from these various backgrounds and show how acceptance and appreciation can be beautiful. Concept #2 addresses the bountiful availability of fresh produce in the area, especially the berries, strawberries, blueberries, blackberries and cherries. These designs are somewhat abstracted and bright and provide levity and color in places where it might be unanticipated.

My designs will enliven the area and help transform the street by providing designs that are bold and colorful and visible from a distance adding vibrancy to the cityscape. They reference various aspects of the city and its residents and will create a sense of place and identity for the community. They will instigate the idea in viewer's minds that many things can be a canvas, and therefore have a positive impact on the viewers and the environment, and finally, they will discourage graffiti.

Artist Statement

Donine Wellman is applying for your consideration for the Redondo Beach Utility Box Project.

I am a full-time artist and have had gallery showings as solo shows, group shows, art fairs and art in public places. I recently completed two of six median mosaics to enhance a local elementary school which finished on time and on budget.

In the past few years, I have had commissions from the City of San Francisco, City of Sacramento, California, and the City of Chattanooga, Tennessee for public art, as well as other arts commissions.

Throughout my career in the arts I have had a commitment to excellence. My art education background, as well as practical experience of fabrication and design, have given me a good understanding of public art operations.

I would like to work on this project because I love to beautify areas with my art. My current work is contemporary, colorful and "happy." It brings joy to those that interact with it.

I believe I am a good candidate for this public art installation. After working with and supporting the City of San Francisco, the City of Rancho Cordova, the City of Elk Grove, the City of Sacramento, and the City of Chattanooga, I have a deeper appreciation for enhancing and contributing to city development. I believe my experience with working with city agencies, contractors, and working within budget guidelines to be an asset for the Redondo Beach Utility Project.

Thank you for your consideration,
Donine Wellman

Donine has a passion for all types of art mediums, and for the last several years has been focusing on Mixed Media and Public Art Commissions. In the 70s, she created batiks and macrame as wall hangings and sculptural pieces and won awards in several art fairs. In the 80s and 90s, her career in Graphic Design gave Donine an opportunity to learn digital art. Some recent gallery showings for her mixed media have been at the Tim Collom Gallery, Adamson Gallery, the Sacramento Temporary Contemporary Gallery, ArtHouse, Hot Italian Restaurant in Sacramento, the Rancho Cordova City Hall, Davis Art Center, ACAI of Carmichael, Blue Line Gallery in Roseville, and Blue Wing Gallery in Woodland, California. She has also shown her art at various art festivals and venues in and around Northern California, and has collectors of her work all over the nation. She also has had Public Art Commissions from the cities of Chattanooga, TN, Sacramento, CA, Rancho Cordova, CA, Davis, CA and San Francisco, CA.

Donine loves the creative process of taking various media and seeing what beauty will emerge. Although she starts with a certain idea in mind, to her joy, the piece usually takes on a life of its own with "happy accidents" along the way. Her influences, and what she likes to portray in her work, come from urban industrial and old world European textures and patinas. Being a Graphic Designer for 20 plus years also has an effect on the balance and composition of her art.

Donine Wellman lives in Klamath River, California, with her husband Sid, who is also an artist.

Artist's Statement

Tim C. Tang is a lifelong resident of Palos Verdes and has enjoyed exploring the South Bay's coastline since childhood. Now a father of 2 young daughters, he loves to take them tidepooling at Bluff Cove, foraging for sea glass at RAT Beach, or walking from Torrance Beach to Redondo Beach Pier for exercise. Business owner by day, Tim paints as a hobby and is interested in sharing this side of him with the others. Utility boxes are a great way to contribute to the South Bay community.

His present artwork submission for the utility box design an abstract biomorphic representation of the flora & fauna that make their home in the tidepools are the PV peninsula.
